One of his well-known quotes is that "success is no more than the natural consequence of consistently applying the fundamentals of success to life. More specifically, well-defined goals for each stage of life are imp My summary and notes: More specifically, well-defined goals for each stage of life are important in order to set them into action. He then goes into how to set goals. First, ask yourself these questions: What do I want to do? What I want to be? What do I want to see? What do I want to have? Where do I want to go? What would I like to share? Use these questions to get started in goal setting and then make sure each goal is concrete. The next point Rohn makes is on time management. He also explains that one should put all concentration and focus into everything you do. He then goes into the importance of seeking knowledge. The first step is personal reflection, followed by seeking help from others, and also from reading and listening to others. Another piece of advice he gives is to work harder on yourself than you do on your job. He then goes into the seasons of life: He talked about developing yourself physically, spiritually, and intellectually. He talks about the most important tool for doing this, which is discipline. He also talks more about time management and describes 4 ways to manage time: The enlightened person schedules time so that there is time for each of the other strategies. Just as much work is completed as does the workaholic because the time spent working is more productive. Time for play and reflection is also scheduled so that there is a time for everything. He also talks about keeping a journal to keep the ideas of your life in. He suggests keeping a calendar as well. Rohn ends the book describing the most important goal behind all of your goals and that is happiness. Accomplishing all of your goals is only useful if striving for the goals makes you happy, not miserable.
