In the world of online dating and relationships, some heartache is almost inevitable. You put your heart in the hands of someone else and trust them to be gentle with it. Sometimes this works out, sometimes they turn out to be a different person to who you hoped for, and sometimes people make mistakes. Whatever the cause of your broken heart, the pain is real and can even show up as physical symptoms. So what are the symptoms of a broken heart? Grief – grief is the feeling of loss of a loved one and is something almost everyone goes through after a breakup. In contrast to depression, people suffering from grief can be comforted by the company of other loved ones. Anxiety can be the root cause of many other symptoms, both physical and emotional – look out for excess sweating and heart palpitations amongst others. When you do manage to drift off, you might also experience disturbed dreams which will leave you exhausted in the morning. Weight loss – Some find that the stress caused by a broken heart suppresses their appetite and even causes nausea, both of which make the thought of tucking into a big meal really unappealing. This in turn leads to lower energy levels and less inclination to go out and try to get over the breakup – something of a vicious circle. Weight gain – We all react to things in different ways, and some find that heartbreak leads to stress eating as a comfort mechanism. If your break up involves administrative nightmares like working out what to do with a mortgage, stress headaches are even more likely to be on the cards. And how do you fix a broken heart? More than anything, the healing process takes time. However, there are some things you can do to try and speed up the process. Here are our top 6 tips for healing a broken heart in record time: This is the perfect distraction and should allow you to adopt a more positive attitude in the face of heartbreak. Get away A holiday with your best pals might be the perfect remedy! A getaway will allow you to relax, have fun and connect with your nearest and dearest rather than moping around the house for days on end. Your closest friends will be on hand for any wobbles you have, as well as being able to ply you with all the advice you could need. Live more healthily For many people, a broken heart can result in eating all the wrong things and getting into the habit of staying at home more than normal. Focusing on eating healthily and exercising will make you feel infinitely better. Start small by making sure to eat your 5 portions of fruit and veg a day or taking up yoga. Even simple things like this can change your outlook. Take things at your own pace. Stop checking up on what your ex is doing and focus on your journey. You can take things at your own pace and chat to as many singles as you want.

Chapter 2 : Beat of the Heart (Runaway Train, #2) by Katie Ashley

A MATCH TO THE HEART investigates the space between living and dying as Ehrlich recounts her travelsâ€”literal and metaphoricalâ€”in the two years after her heart stopped and was revived.

The "Hart Foundation" name then became exclusive to Bret, Neidhart and manager Jimmy Hart, due to the similar family names of both team members and their manager. During this time, Hart began wearing his signature [38] sunglasses , initially to conceal his nervousness during promos. Hart considers his microphone work to have been a weakness throughout his early career. He lasted 25 minutes and 42 seconds before being eliminated by Don Muraco. He would headline his first pay-per-view as champion with a successful title defense against Shawn Michaels at the Survivor Series , [69] and defeated Razor Ramon at the Royal Rumble. When Bret appeared to have the match won, with Yokozuna locked in the sharpshooter, Owen came to ringside to congratulate his brother. Owen then involved himself in the match, resulting in a victory for Yokozuna via disqualification. The Harts won the match, with all of the brothers surviving except for Owen, the only Hart family member eliminated when he was rolled up by Michaels after inadvertently knocking Bret off the apron. Owen demanded a one-on-one match with Bret, which Bret refused to accept. In the storyline, Bret, along with his parents, worked over the Christmas holidays to reunite the family and to settle their rivalry. Referee Tim White stopped the match after he considered Bret unable to continue after he sustained a kayfabe knee injury during the match. After the match, Owen berated his brother for costing him a title opportunity and attacked the injured knee, setting the feud between the two. Hart and Lex Luger were the final two participants and the two were eliminated over the top rope at the same time. Therefore, both men were named co-winners of the Royal Rumble match and received title shots at WrestleMania X. Neidhart left when Diesel and Michaels attacked Hart following the match. He was voted the greatest wrestler of by Pro Wrestling Illustrated readers, winning the vote for the second straight year. By , Hart was focusing on projects outwith the business, such as acting, and shifted to the number two face in the company, behind Diesel. Both men embraced in a display of sportsmanship after the match. He defeated Hakushi in the very first match of the in Your House series. After disposing of Lawler, Hart engaged in a three-month feud with Jean-Pierre Lafitte , who would stealing the mirrored sunglasses from fans at ringside and his trademark leather jacket. The wrestler with the most decisions during the 60 minutes would win the match and the WWF World Heavyweight Championship. At WrestleMania, with less than a minute left on the clock and the score still 0â€”0, Michaels jumped from the middle rope; his legs were caught by Hart, and Hart locked in his Sharpshooter. However, Michaels did not submit in the last 30 seconds so the match ended in a tie. Michaels hit a superkick to win the championship. The tour ended on April 22, and after this he took his hiatus from television. His final televised appearance was an interview taped while on the European tour in which he described his passion for wrestling was diminished, and stated that although there were offers from competing companies he might be finished with wrestling. Hart Foundation reunion Hart posing for the crowd with his arms open Over the summer, Stone Cold Steve Austin , who was fresh from winning the King of the Ring , [] continually taunted Hart and challenged him to come back and have a match. After an eight-month hiatus from television, Hart returned and defeated Austin at Survivor Series in a match for the number one contender spot to the WWF World Heavyweight Championship. The building tension between Hart and Michaels climaxed after the match, when Hart assaulted Michaels. Final Four , with the winner becoming the number one contender. Sid ultimately retained, leading to a pure grudge match for Hart and Austin. In the end, Hart locked the Sharpshooter on a bloody Austin, who refused to give up. In fact, Austin never quit, but passed out from the blood loss and pain. Ken Shamrock , the special guest referee, awarded Hart the match, after which he continued to assault Austin, thus turning heel for the first time since Undertaker won the match, which ended with Hart hotshotting Sid on the ropes, therefore costing him the title. Rocky Maivia won by disqualification when Hart refused to release a figure-four leglock applied around the ringpost. He faced Austin again in the main event of In Your House A Cold Day in Hell. The match was ruled a no contest and Austin afterward continued to beat Hart while on a stretcher in the back of an ambulance. In , Hart became a tweener: The family members formed a new Hart Foundation with Brian Pillman ; this incarnation was an anti-American stable which was popular within Canada and Europe. As the leader of this stable, Hart routinely carried a Canadian flag to the ring and engaged in promos where he declared the superiority of his home nation; he became so despised by U. Michaels, who, as part of another pre-match stipulation, would be banned from wrestling in the United States if he did not remain impartial as referee, had no option but to count the pinfall, giving his rival Hart the victory. This was used as part of his character, as Hart would insult the U. In Your House , [] avenging a loss to him on the July 28 Raw. Hart later apologized for his participation in the storyline and said that he had been pressured into it, saying, "I am not in any shape or form a racist. I also want to apologize for any remarks I made about gay people. It was a stupid mistake on my part".
