List of Absolutely Fabulous episodes Absolutely Fabulous first aired on 12 November and ran for three series , until 4 May , when the sixth episode of series 3 was billed as the last ever episode. However, the following year in November , two specials called "The Last Shout" were broadcast and were also billed as the last ever episodes. Both episodes featured end sequences with flashes to the future. However, after writing Mirrorball , Jennifer Saunders decided she had more ideas, [10] leading to a fourth series, which premiered on 31 August , while a subsequent special airing in A fifth series premiered on 17 October , and another special, which aired on 25 December This was followed by a short special for Comic Relief in March In July , Saunders announced she would not be writing or playing Edina again, stating "The 6am calls to go to make-up and all the promotional work wear you down. I would like to write and direct"that would be my joy". However, in November , Lumley revealed to Playbill magazine that she had recently spoken to Saunders about the possibility of filming a new series. On 29 August , it was announced that a further series of three programmes was being made to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the original production. The last, entitled "Olympics", aired on 23 July The BBC were rumoured to also be urging her to write a sixth series for On 29 November , Jennifer Saunders confirmed that "She was done" with Absolutely Fabulous and it would not be returning to television for another series, or specials, nor would a sequel to the film be made. Saunders now wishes to focus on new projects and spend more time with her family. Eddy and Patsy are looking for what they imagine glamorous life should be. The song was also sung by Marianne Faithfull and P. Arnold for the "Last Shout" special in Hermine Demoriane sang a French version of the theme song over the closing credits of the episode "Paris". More recently, it has been sung by Debbie Harry , who also guest-starred in the Christmas special "Gay". For series four, a line sung by David Bowie, "Ziggy played guitar", from the song " Ziggy Stardust " played at the end of each episode. Due to copyright issues, the theme song is missing from many of the US Region 1 DVDs, being replaced by an instrumental version of the song. In addition to the official theme song, in , Pet Shop Boys recorded a song for Comic Relief using excerpts of dialogue from the series put to dance music. The music video featured clips from the show and specially recorded footage of the Pet Shop Boys with Patsy and Edina. TV , and moved to The Comedy Channel in Repeats of the first three series were also shown on the Seven network. The ABC continues to show it sporadically and shows Christmas Specials and occasional repeats of series 5 episodes. ABC2 also shows repeats of the show. In Serbia, the first series was aired in , through a network of local television stations. In the series was aired in its entirety on B92 , while in the Czech Republic all episodes have been shown. In the Republic of Macedonia, all episodes have been shown a couple of times on Sitel. In Sweden, all episodes were first broadcast by SVT , but reruns have later appeared on other channels. In Estonia, the series was broadcast by ETV. In Brazil, it was aired on GNT. Adaptations and related shows[ edit ] Absolutely Fabulous inspired a French feature film, called Absolument fabuleux , in Saunders had a small cameo alongside Catherine Deneuve as a spectator at a fashion show. However, Barr did incorporate many elements of the show into the ninth season of her eponymous show Roseanne , in which her character wins the lottery: Saunders and Lumley reprised their characters Edina and Patsy, and Mo Gaffney also appeared in the episode, but not as her character Bo. The series was to be relocated to Los Angeles. Miranda Hart, creator of the show, had previously appeared on Absolutely Fabulous. Mirrorball[ edit ] Mirrorball was a pilot set in the London theatre scene, starring the cast of Absolutely Fabulous as alternative characters. While writing and filming the show, Saunders was inspired to revive Absolutely Fabulous for a fourth series, which resulted in her abandoning Mirrorball. It was eventually aired as a television special, and is included as a special feature on the DVD of the fourth season. Future[ edit ] There are currently no plans for Absolutely Fabulous to return to television for a new series, specials, nor film as the planned sequel to the feature film was cancelled. Although the series was intended to end in following the third series, an official finale, "The Last Shout", which was broadcast in and marked a closure for the series. However, it was revived in It was again mentioned that the series would not return following the Christmas special, "White Box", but three 20th Anniversary specials were screened some time later with speculation that a new series would be broadcast in the future. Series 1&#x2014;4 in The entire series is also available on demand on iTunes. When the first three series were re-released on DVD, they did not include corresponding cover photography to their series: Series 1 included an image from the Series 3 episode "Jealous", Series 2 had an image from Series 3 episode "Doorhandle" and Series 3 is from the Series 2 episode "Poor". All other releases included imagery from the correct series, as do the original VHS releases. Another feature-length special White Box was released exclusively to the American market. It was eventually released in the United Kingdom on 15 November with its inclusion in the Absolutely Everything box set. Other releases include Absolutely Not, a bloopers and outtakes collection, and Absolutely Fabulous: A Life released as "Ab Fab: The series is also available on Netflix.
