

Chapter 1 : All Grown Up, Volume 2: Coup Deville by Ian Mayer

What can Phil do when Lil doesn't want to act like a twin anymore? There's always Dil Pickles, ready to step in as a twin replacement! However, Lil's new attitude is threatening the family's trip to the Twins Canyon theme park, where twins get in for half-off but only if they dress alike!

July Thomas "Tommy" Pickles: Tommy, now an year-old boy with a full head of hair, is the elder brother of Dil Pickles and self-proclaimed leader of the group. Many years ago, he once fell into the river water but his grandpa Lou got him out quickly but this experience affected Tommy, causing him to have a fear of water. He also has an interest in film making and inventing like his father. His friends still look up to him for help and advice whenever the situation gets out of control. Dil is known for his unconventional habits, style, speech, interests and beliefs especially in aliens which are hinted to have been caused by being dropped as a baby by the DeVille twins. Although he is the youngest he is often the most insightful of the group and has really deep moments.

Charles "Chuckie" Finster, Jr.: At 12 years old, Chuckie is still shy and timid, although he has a "rebellious streak" at times and can be protective of Kimi. He and Tommy are known to cause havoc at school, angering their vice principal. He gets gross tendencies. Phil and Lil are good friends of Tommy, Chuckie and Dil. Phil and Lil are 11 years old twins who have remained very close and still have gross tendencies when together. Lil is a tomboy but has matured a bit more than her brother and has picked up interests in fashion and boys. Phil has displayed some talent at cooking. Both of them have an interest in sports and have been on the school soccer team. While she lives with her mother Kira and step-father Chas, she has a good relationship with her biological father, Hiro, who lives in Japan. Kimi also has a good relationship with Chuckie even though sometimes he is protective of her. Like Lil she has grown into a little bit of a tomboy, has adopted a punk style, and has started embracing her Japanese heritage more. She is usually seen doing many typical "teen things" like getting a cell phone, pursuing boys, and getting the latest fashion trends. Although she has grown up, Angelica continues to be mean and spoiled in her pursuit of popularity. She also still constantly rivals the rest of the kids with her self-serving and bossy behavior. However, she maintains a close relationship with Susie and has learned to soften up to others, frequently giving help or acting kind when it comes down to it. Susie is still known to be helpful and kind to her younger friends while also keeping her reputation as the responsible one of the group. She is smart and has displayed a considerable talent for singing, a skill that often makes Angelica jealous because of the attention she receives for it.

Production history[edit] The idea originated in All Growned Up, a special which aired in to celebrate the 10th anniversary of Rugrats. Nickelodeon was so impressed by the high ratings it achieved, with more than 12 million viewers tuning into the special, [3] that it commissioned an entire series revolving around the teenage main characters. During summer , teasers for All Grown Up aired. However, the scenes shown were not clips from actual episodes of the show. At the time, this was not the only spinoff of Rugrats under consideration[citation needed]. In , Nickelodeon aired the episode Pre-School Daze, [4] the proposed pilot to a series in which characters Angelica and Susie attend pre-school the program ultimately aired in the UK in , and then made its North American debut, long after the original series had been cancelled, in . When the series did start its regular run, more than 5. The April sneak peek did not make the top 15 cable programs for that week, due to the ongoing war in Iraq. The original titles for this series were All Growned Up! In addition, in its first season, All Grown Up! Although it later returned to air the remaining episodes in DVDs have been released:

When the babies were watching a science fiction oriented movie about a time-traveling machine , Angelica shows them her new "tapiyokie" karaoke machine. She forbids the babies to play with it, but, as with many of her toys, they do. Angelica is angry and chases the babies into a closet , with Angelica on the outside. Angelica starts counting to ten for them to come out, and Tommy suggests they go to "the foocher" the future so that they will be grown up enough for Angelica not to boss them around any more. Angelica says multiple random numbers in incorrect order before reaching 10, so this gives the babies enough time to rig the karaoke machine into a time-travel device. At the exact moment Angelica reaches ten, Tommy pushes a button and there is a swirling orange vortex and the babies see themselves in the future. They are now ten years older. The group stumbles out of the closet and teenage Angelica demands her Emica CD back Emica is a famous popstar that all the kids like. They want the CD to learn each song in hopes that Emica will call one of them up to sing with her. In the beginning of this part of the episode, nine-year-old Dil is shown to have an unusual personality, and Angelica states that it is because Phil and Lil dropped him on his head when he was a baby. Stu says that he has a disco dance on the same day that the group has their concert. She also says that she is going to wear the zodiac necklace that Emica and Stu wears. She says that if he does so, she will introduce Samantha to Chuckie. Tommy plans to ask Stu if he can borrow the necklace for the night, but quickly realises it is easier said than done when Stu says he cannot dance without it. Tommy makes a fake necklace a round dog biscuit wrapped in gold foil with the zodiac sign drawing , and switches it out for the real necklace. Unexpectedly, Spike eats the decoy overnight, then mistakes the real necklace for another one and takes it. Stu finds out the next morning, and Tommy takes the blame for stealing it. The group is sitting in their old sandbox, feeling gloomy that their friend is going to miss the concert. Stu and Didi hire Susie to babysit Tommy while they are at the dance, as she is not able to attend the Emica concert. Lil finds the necklace in the sandbox, as Spike buried it there once he discovered it was not a dog biscuit like the decoy was, and they need to return the necklace to Stu. Tommy is reluctant to do so, because he is not allowed to leave the house. Dil encourages Tommy to do otherwise. Susie who is watching the same sci-fi film as the babies did in the beginning of the episode catches them as they leave the house, stating that she knows when they are always up to something. She then eagerly goes with the gang to return the necklace. On the way, they ride their bikes by the concert, where Angelica, who is nervously facing peer pressure from Samantha, runs towards them to get the necklace. Samantha shares her experiences with braces to "Charlie", as he is wearing them also, and the two are smitten with each other. As one more act of kindness, Angelica gives her ticket to Susie. The kids then head off to the concert, where Angelica decides to head home and let the others enjoy it. Tommy offers to give Angelica his ticket as a thanks but as she declines, their grandfather then arrives with two tickets. One was intended for his wife, Lulu, but he gives it to Angelica because she is away on a trip. In the stadium, Emica starts to sing. She calls Tommy up to sing, but Angelica begs to be up too, and Emica agrees. They struggle to what seems as backstage but travel back into the closet where the episode first began, where Angelica and the babies are struggling over the karaoke machine and end up breaking it. Angelica yells at them, saying that they have to stay away from her items for the next "bazillion" years. Tommy states he is glad that Angelica will be nicer to them in ten more years, but he spoke too soon. The special was also included on the Nick Picks: Characters from now[edit].

Many artists just try to replicate something they love in their unique artistic styles. Nickelodeon offers a lot of options when it comes to fans coming up with their spin on characters. Unlike a network like PBS, which is all about educational programming, Nickelodeon existed to create great original cartoons as entertainment, as well as live-action shows for kids and teenagers. The Last Airbender as franchise titles, there is a lot of material for artists to choose from. With so many classic cartoons based on child characters, there are also plenty of chances to bring these characters into adulthood. The hero in this series was a year-old boy named Danny Fenton whose parents were ghost hunters. He then protects his hometown from ghosts. While the series ended with Danny revealing his secret to the world and becoming a real hero, there was no telling how his career would progress. As such a young child, it was interesting to wonder how Diego might look when, and if, he ever grew older, considering his childhood obsessions with dangerous animals. The cartoon was about a nine-year-old named Arnold who lived in a boarding house with his grandparents. InvisibleDeath from Deviant Art created this piece of Nickelodeon fan art that showed Arnold and Helga finally getting together once they were both grown up. This artwork by nintendomaximus of Deviant Art supposes that Tommy and Tootie end up married, much to the pleasure of Tootie herself. Real Monsters is more disturbing than anything else. The cartoon itself aired from through with a total of 52 episodes and was about three child monsters who attend a school that teaches them how to scare humans. The entire premise was that the monsters were children and looked very silly, but tried to act scary. The animated characters initially debuted as a novelty music project where cover songs were recorded in a sped up voice that sounded like what some believed a chipmunk might sound like if singing. Now in its third season, the boys are still pre-teen children musical stars, never growing over the 50 years since their introduction. Robaato from Deviant Art created the above image to show what the Chipmunks might look like if they ever aged into teenagers. Krabs and Squidward Tentacles. However, in this fan artwork for the Nickelodeon cartoon, the artist showed a very adult SpongeBob in what can only be described as fan shipping with his buddy Sandy Cheeks.
