History[edit] Sculpture of a sailor and his family, gazing eastward, over Lake Michigan Soldier Field was designed in and opened on October 9, , as Municipal Grant Park Stadium. The name was changed to Soldier Field on November 11, , as a memorial to U. Early configuration[edit] In its earliest configuration, Soldier Field was capable of seating 74, spectators and was in the shape of a U. Additional seating could be added along the interior field, upper promenades and on the large, open field and terrace beyond the north endzone, [17] bringing the seating capacity to over , The Chicago Cardinals used it as their home field for their final season in Chicago in A dozen years later in September , the Chicago Bears moved in, originally with a three-year commitment. They had intended to build a stadium in Arlington Heights. In , the Bears and the Chicago Park District agreed to a year lease and renovation of the stadium. Both parties pooled their resources for the renovation. Because of this, Bears president Michael McCaskey considered relocation as a possible factor for a new stadium. In , McCaskey announced that he and Northwest Indiana developers agreed to construction of an entertainment complex called "Planet Park", which would also include a new stadium. Aerial view from , showing Soldier Field with interior demolished. Meigs Field airport is to the right in the image. Soldier Field as seen from Lake Shore Drive. The modern grandstands, added in , extend well above the original Neoclassical columns. Beginning in , the plank seating was replaced by individual seats with backs and armrests. In , a new press box as well as 60 skyboxes were added to the stadium, boosting capacity to 66, In , 56 more skyboxes were added increasing capacity to 66, Capacity was slightly increased to 66, in By , capacity was slightly reduced to 66, During the renovation, seating capacity was reduced to 55, by building a grandstand in the open end of the U shape. This moved the field closer to both ends at the expense of seating capacity. The goal of this renovation was to move the fans closer to the field. Stadium grounds were reconfigured by Chicago-based architecture firm of Lohan Associate, led by architect Dirk Lohan, the grandson of architect Ludwig Mies van der Rohe. This is an example of facadism. On January 19, , the night of the Bears playoff loss to the Philadelphia Eagles, demolition was begun as tailgate fires still burned in the trashcans in the parking lots. Removal of 24, stadium seats in 36 hours by Archer Seating Clearinghouse, a speed record never exceeded since, was the first step in building the new Soldier Field. Nostalgic Bears fans, recalling the glory seasons, especially , along with some retired players picked up their seats in the South Parking lot. The foremen on the job were Grant Wedding, who himself installed the seats in , and Mark Wretschko who was an executive for the factory who made the seats. Dozens of articles by writers and columnists attacked the project as an aesthetic, political, and financial nightmare. The project received mixed reviews within the architecture community, including criticism by civic and preservation groups. Nobody has copied it; nobody has learned from it. People like it for nostalgic reasons. Ahlgren was quoted in Preservation Online as stating that "if we had let this stand, I believe it would have lowered the standard of National Historic Landmarks throughout the country", and, "If we want to keep the integrity of the program, let alone the landmarks, we really had no other recourse.

The Fox team was doing their best to whip the viewers into a frenzy with steeply slated reports on both recent events and some going as far back as Benghazi. The dozen or so other patients in the room were all in a lather. A comfort animal cowered in the corner with his paws over his ears. I tried to offer the little fella comfort, but I felt as out of place as Plaid Shirt Guy at a Trump rally. Many veterans have stress issues, some related to combat, while others are related to previous encounters with the VA health care system. The suicide rate among veterans is appallingly high. The VA says they care, but running Fox News seems to indicate otherwise. Sometimes I wonder if the VA views suicide as a problem or simply a way to cut down on the workload. Obesity is often an issue with this group so The Food Channel is out of the question. The Weather Channel once served as a peaceful oasis, but with constant reports of floods, earthquakes, fires, hurricanes and tornadoes, it now looks more like the Book of Revelations illustrated. With all the options available, surely the VA can find a better match for stressed-out vets. Anything but Fox News. Certain words within it are capitalized and much larger than the rest, intended by the Founding Fathers to emphasize their importance. Article I imparts legislative powers to a congress composed of a Senate and House of Representatives. The last four articles map guidelines for governance, citizen rights, matters of revenue and passage of amendments. Our Constitution was and is a noble and worthy endeavor: Its Preamble is the idea, the heart. Everything else is detail. The first and most important detail is that power to make laws lies with a gathering of delegates chosen by and in service to We the People. Upon gathering, the Founding Fathers were not all of one mind as to how this dream should be made real. They wanted a country embracing the ideals of liberty and justice for all. They sat, stood, paced, talked, suggested, argued and worked it out. We owe them and ourselves a sincere attempt to do the same. A true patriot is not necessarily someone who thinks the same as you. A patriot actively supports the details and ideals of our constitution. It was always meant to be We. Earth has two poles. Opposites exist, but share an attraction. This gives balance, without which collapse is inevitable. Americans cannot allow themselves to become so polarized as to deny and refuse to consider everything in between. We must not fall into the trap of thinking that partisanship is patriotism. United we stand, divided we fall. Not just words, these speak reality. Two wings work together pursuing one goal. As citizens of the United States our goal should always be to insure life, liberty and justice for all, to provide for the common good. Give it real thought if you would be a true patriot. Jim Frey Witter From the web: In response to the Sept. The GOP waits days on Garland and we need to rush this selection through? The GOP is devoid of decency and running scared from the orange blob. I am pleased that there will be an FBI investigation and hope they can clear the air. However, in the end, voters must get off their asses and vote How is it that almost half of eligible voters fail to get out and vote one day every two years? This is insane and leads us to the poop pile we have today. Wake up, folks, drive friends and family to vote. Our country is not this ugly and with greater turnout, things should get better as we avoid what is up until now quite possibly the most embarrassing and destructive president in our history. She may have been drinking at other times when she was underage but that has no bearing on whether her allegations are true. A common tactic to discredit women who have been sexually assaulted is to look for behavior in their past to portray them as unreliable. That is why survivors of rape and sexual assault are afraid to come forward. Past drinking or sexual behavior in no way invalidates a report of sexual assault. Victim blaming is not a
