Night Asher smiled lightly as he saw Willow enter the room that both he and Jean-Claude were sitting in. Willow lit up seeing both of them and ran to Asher who scooped her up into a hug. Willow wrapped her hands around his neck and quickly let go wanting to go hug Jean-Claude. Jean-Claude stared curiously at Asher before holding Willow at bay for a moment. Asher startled grabbed a few locks of his long hair and inspected sticky, shiny, pink, goo on them. Asher turned to Jean-Claude. Willow looked at Asher happily. Then, she turned to Jean-Claude. The slush slipped out of her stained pockets and hit Jean-Claude on the lap completely destroying the designer pants. Jean-Claude stood up from his seat with a start and lifted Willow away from himself. He stared at the pants before turning to Willow who held multicolored slush in her small hand. He saw a dark blue-green stain on her sweater that was now wrapped around her waist and jeans. He sighed in frustration as they had very little to almost no clothing for her. Willow looked at the thing in her hands and moved to put it in her mouth when Asher quickly moved and grabbed it. It appeared he was saving her from doing that a lot now that she was with them. And some funny smelling stuff I found in the closet with the brooms. Asher grasped both her hands and shook his head. Now he was rather glad he stopped her from eating it then he froze, as did Jean-Claude as they thought of her ingesting this before having come to them. It was then that the door opened and Anita stepped in. She froze at the sight. What the hell was that? Jean-Claude looked at Anita. She stated she found it in the broom closet. Anita looked at him sharply. He smiled gently at her before she had moved to his hair. He briefly wondered what it would do to its quality before he put her down. She is very powerful for her age. Last night during our attempt to bathe her, she stopped us without even an uttering of a spell. We could not move until she was in the hallway. She either has a small field range or thought herself safe to escape the bath in the hall not knowing how fast we can be. Then turned to him. We will go to buy her clothing this evening. If you wish to accompany us, you are more than welcome ma petite. Richard was slightly disappointed by lack of variety that he could prepare in his food. He knew he could make something healthy but it was rather limited to what he had bothered to learn. He looked at Oz who was kicking his feet under the table at he pick at green beans. He bit them and sighed. He made an odd sight, as his nails had been painted black, by a marker; while his hair still retained the colors form the cotton candy in a light blue pair of pajamas. His neighbor had given him a look as he came out with Oz in his semi-colored hair. Richard strengthened his resolve. What else can you do? I know you can play the guitar. A baby could do that dad. Where did you learn a bit of French? He wondered how he had been accepted into UC Sunnydale then, he mused. He tried to grasp the name Sunnydale but it seemed to be impossible, it was like a wisp in his memory. Oz concentrated on the last set of thoughts. He wanted to reach out and ask him what was going on in his head but knew it could do with his past and waited. First there was an attempted burning on Willow and the sense that there were monsters there according to him. He had to ask him again what he thought of Asher and Jean-Claude. Willow clearly was happy with the vampires and it looked like they were from the same town. Richard felt his mouth open when Oz spoke again. Oz shook his head. He turned to look at Richard. Where did you get that idea? He hesitated on the next question. Richard felt his anger come forward, who in their right minds would make children kill things that could easily kill them? Oz made a small noise in the back of his throat that gave off his annoyance. Jordy bit me on accident. Richard took that as a yes. Is Uncle going to be there? Oz nodded looking happier; he looked slightly thoughtful for a moment before he asked Richard: She was nice to us. Willow said she was lonely though. Willow said he was going to find her some friends. It was pretty boring. Oz smiled slightly before he sighed and finished his green beans. Dinner was finished and Richard did the dishes while Oz went off to play with his guitar. The phone rang as Richard was grading a few papers and he called out for Oz to stop playing for a moment a few hours later. He picked up the phone. Lillian at the moment. Jason had kept hem safe and aside from the questionable lamia incident and cotton candy was fairly responsible over the two. If you could only see the fuss Jean-Claude and Asher are putting up. She has them enamored as much as Daniel has you. She had eaten shampoo, soap, some sort of cleaner and a bit of toothpaste. Maybe Willow can as well. She should be fine. Oz came in from the other room.

She has made so many of those inspirational tags. You should take a look and admire her creation: Her blog is here: It was cold and rainy here in Houston, Texas today and so I did not spend a lot of time outside taking detailed pictures. When I have more times, I may do a more comprehensive tutorial, here is a very simplified version: All of floss tags that I made this week were "rounded". I did not use any iron on fusible web. I used a very light weighted cardboard. Here are the front and back of the pieces: I used one eyelet for the front piece and another eyelet for the back piece. I intentionally picked 2 different eyelet colors for the front and back. I whipped the 2 pieces together matching the top eyelets and then put pins and ribbon trims around the finished piece: Ok, there are reasons why I used 2 eyelets in one floss ring tag. First of all one eyelet is not deep enough to go through 2 layers of fabric and 2 layers of cardboards. Second, the eyelets always look the best on the top part, but the bottom part may not always look as good. So when I used 2 eyelets you always have the best result and the not so perfect parts are hidden. There is another tool for Scrapbooking that you can use as well, it is called "crop-a-dile". There are more eyelet choices with scrapbook eyelets as far as shapes and colors. If the demand is good, I will carry more variety. Are you ready to make some now with all the information????????? But not just any fair, mind you! There, all your sugar-coated, sweet-tooth dreams just came true. You plunked down 25 cents which was a lot of money! About ten or so years later, your doting mother took that photo to a photography artist and had it hand-painted, because by about , hand painted photographs were all the rage. And your family has treasured the keepsake ever since, each generation contending that the newest edition little Fred or sweet Sally looks just like Great Great Great Uncle Charlie or Aunt Dahlia in that old photo of the Kid at the Fair with the Cotton Candy. The resulting monogram was rather pretty it seemed to gleam a nice pinky gold. At that time, a few people wrote in to ask what the effect would be, if I used Coloris instead of Variations. I wrote about Coloris a while ago , explaining what it is and how it is different from Variations. Well, in the Spirit of Exploration and Adventure, I decided to try it! The color I chose for the experiment was Otherwise, the effect would have been distinctly stripey, and I think it would have looked even odder than it already does. Much of the food is fried or grilled, and much of it as sugary as the cotton candy I remember from the Texas fairs of my childhood. Savory fair includes Raclette, piadinas, fish and chips, risotto, crepes, burgers and more.

Preachers serving up light, fluffy sermons Posted Thursday, July 2, 1: Like most kids, I enjoyed the rides, games, animals, and the various exhibits. However, many of my fondest memories from the fair involve food. I loved eating the corn dogs, but, in particular, I enjoyed the cotton candy. Since it was light, fluffy, and sweet, I could literally eat cotton candy all day long. Consequently, my mom and dad strictly monitored my cotton candy consumption. They knew that cotton candy, alone, would not sustain me as I walked around in the hot sun. I needed to consume some protein while staying properly hydrated with water. My parents also knew that a diet restricted to cotton candy would result in me getting sick while on the rides. As I think about my early experience with cotton candy, the Christian Church in America comes to mind. You see, that experience serves as a powerful metaphor for the condition of the Church and many individual Christians. Consequently, some of the more prominent preachers of our day are happy to serve up cotton candy sermons and books that are soft on sin. I contend that there are several things that characterize cotton candy Christianity. Firstly, it is light on Christ-centered ministry. In other words, there is little, if any, emphasis on the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Now, let me clarify what the true Gospel message is. It involves the recognition that we as humans are totally depraved sinners, desperately in need of the Savior. Having received Christ, we are called into a life of discipline and obedience which requires us to surrender our time, talent, and treasure to His Lordship. My experience as a pastor tells me that many church members hate being held accountable beyond their weekly attendance of corporate worship. We must realize, however, that when it comes to our level of commitment, God wants full custody, not just weekend visits. Cotton candy Christianity is not just light on Christ-centered ministry and Christian commitment; it is also light on convictional preaching. Now, while encouraging and comforting messages certainly have their place, the convictional preacher understands that the main goal of preaching is not happiness; but holiness. Paul clearly understood this when he said, in 2 Timothy 4: For the time is coming when people will not endure sound teaching, but having itching ears they will accumulate for themselves teachers to suit their own passions, and will turn away from listening to the truth and wander off into myths. This kind of preaching, anointed by the Holy Spirit, helps the people of God fall in love with the Word of God. In the final analysis, cotton candy may be sweet, but it has little substance.

Ingalls' story, centered on the modernization of cotton candy, is well matched by Blanco's colorful, whimsical, full-page World's Fair scenes, which pack in plenty of period detail, including clothing, transportation, and images of the historic exhibits.

A diet of cotton candy does nothing to nourish the body, cotton candy sermons, nonconvictional preaching does nothing to nourish the soul of those who hear it. I thank God that I am nourished by convictional preaching, Pastor Bowman preached full throttle every time he stands.
