These "newly discovered" points are said not to be associated with any other acupuncture system, according to their discoverer Freddy Dahlgren, D. Sir Anton Jayasuriya of Sri Lanka. He sold diplomas for various fields. I have a copy of his charge list for The letters stand for Membership of Acupuncture Foundation. He has since moved on to produce ointments to which he adds frequencies. According to Dahlgren, these frequencies "detoxify and clean the facial lymph and microcirculation. Furthermore, frequencies of important vitamins, oils and minerals have been added. But his real claim to fame is curing eye diseases with needles in the hands and feet. He treats "glaucoma, AMD [age-related macular degeneration], age related reduction of vision, and retina porosity. If the test does not show an immediate positive result, our advice to the client is not to continue treatments, since the outcome will probably be dissatisfactory. In fact, only patients whom we are sure to benefit from the treatments will be invited to continue in our clinic. In addition to acupuncture, Dahlgren gives his patients "drops" that he has developed. Per Godsk Otte , D. To say Otte "shares" the discovery might be overstating the case. Dahlgren makes no mention of Otte and Otte makes no mention of Dahlgren on their respective Web sites. Otte is another naturopath who got an M. Otte also treats various eye disorders with acupuncture, including macular degeneration, diabetes, glaucoma, and retinitis pigmentosa. Before that, his license to practice acupuncture was revoked in Texas. Even so, Otte has advanced the field of microacupuncture by finding a new point to stick in the forehead. On his Web site , Otte claims that "there are only a few doctors in the world who are performing this procedure which is approved by Medicina Alternativa, which [he claims] is a department of the World Health Organization WHO. In fact, Otte has advanced the field of acupuncture itself by providing his insight into meridians, the alleged pathways of chi. Acupuncture does not work through nerves. It works through pathways called meridians. I think that meridians are leftovers of the nerve system that monitored our development as the fetus, which was controlled by the mother through the umbilical cord. That system was shut down at birth, and the pathways are now changed to what we now call meridians, which distribute energy from the production to the area of use. The more active the tissue is, the more energy is produced arms, legs, hands, feet, where there is the most mobility. The thought is that acupuncture might be able to reactivate the original function of that nerve system to build new cells, which would explain the effect of microacupuncture on rebuilding the cells of the retina. Nobody awaits the evidence for the claim that meridians are umbilical leftovers, since it is based on nothing more than fantasy. Another Dane claiming to be performing miracles with microacupuncture is John Boel. On his Web site there are stories of nine blind people having their vision restored by acupuncture. There are many other miracles attested to by Boel. The stories are heartwarming but sound too good to be true. They go beyond testimonials of feeling better or seeing better, which might be due to a placebo effect. There is no placebo effect in a story of a person blind for thirty years who now has vision after acupuncture treatment. I suppose there has been a conspiracy on the part of the medical profession and government agencies to prevent the world from knowing about this miraculous practice and its miraculous cures. In any case, there have been no clinical trials of microacupuncture. All the evidence is in the form of testimonials from patients and doctors. There is, as yet, no compelling scientific evidence that sticking needles in the hand or foot or forehead is an effective treatment for any eye disease or diabetes. This fact, of course, will not prevent many desperate people from seeking treatments from the likes of Dahlgren, Otte, and Boel. Microacupuncture as practiced by the likes of Dahlgren, Otte, and Boel should not be confused with micro-acupuncture as created by Ralph Alan Dale , Ed. According to Dale, a former conductor and composer, he learned acupuncture in from "a young Chinese man in Florida who had just graduated from an acupuncture college in Hong Kong. Paul Nogier of Lyons, France, who first discovered that the ear is a complete energetic system, and that it can be used to treat the whole body. He claims to have evidence of eighteen different microacupuncture holograms in the body, including one in the hands, feet, arms, neck, tongue, and even the gums. Dale feels that these microsystems are

"holographic reiterations of the gross anatomy," and believes there are still other such systems waiting to be discovered. Otte was a peat moss farmer, electrician, and welder before he became a multi-diplomaed microacupuncturist. Apparently, whenever Jayasuriya put on a conference, he falsely claimed that it was affiliated with the WHO. This is the fellow who sold Dahlgren, Otte, and Boel some of their diplomas. Meanwhile, all these fellows except Otte are plying their trade legally and with the blessings of various government licensing boards. I suppose we could say that such is one of the unpleasant side-effects of complementary medicine.
