Overview[ edit ] Beetle was originally a college student at Rockview University. Army, where he has remained ever since. Most of the humor in Beetle Bailey revolves around the inept characters stationed at Camp Swampy inspired by Camp Crowder , where Walker had once been stationed while in the Army , which is located near the town of Hurleyburg [3] at " Parris Island, S. The characters never seem to see combat themselves, with the exception of mock battles and combat drills. In fact, they seem to be in their own version of stereotypical comic strip purgatory initially basic training, they now appear to be stuck in time in a regular infantry division. The uniforms of Beetle Bailey are still the uniforms of the late s to early s Army, with green fatigues and baseball caps as the basic uniform, and the open jeep as the basic military vehicle. Sergeant First Class Snorkel wears a green Class A Army dress uniform with heavily wrinkled garrison cap ; the officers wear M1 helmet liners painted with their insignia. Beetle is always seen with a hat or helmet covering his forehead and eyes. Even on leave, his "civvies" include a pork pie hat worn in the same style. He can only be seen without it onceâ€”in the original strip when he was still a college student. The strip was pulled and never ran in any newspaper. One running gag has Sergeant Snorkel hanging helplessly from a small tree branch after having fallen off a cliff first time August 16, While he is never shown falling off, or even walking close to the edge of a cliff, he always seems to hold on to that same branch, yelling for help. Beetle Bailey November 21, As of , the strip was being syndicated by King Features in 1, papers in the United States and the rest of the world. While many of the older characters are rarely seen, almost none have been completely retired. Sergeant 1st Class Orville P. Sarge is known to frequently beat up Beetle for any excuse he can think of, leaving Beetle a shapeless pulp. Once, in the February 2, strip, he even shoved Beetle through a knothole in the floorboard. Sarge is too lovable to be a villain, however. Obese, snaggle-toothed, and volatile, Sarge can be alternately short-tempered and sentimental. They share an uneasy alliance that sometimes borders on genuine albeit unequal friendship. Sarge is also a helpless foodie, loves food like crazy and does not miss even a single chance where he can lay his hands on food. In some early strips Sarge was married, but he was later retconned into an unmarried Army lifer, who knows next to nothing about civilian life. Despite his grouchiness and bossiness, Sarge does have a soft side, which he usually keeps concealed. He is from Pork Corners, Kansas. He was also known to be very foul-mouthed, even compared to the rest of the cast. Otto is fiercely protective of Sarge, and seems to have a particular antipathy towards Beetle. First appearance July 17, , originally he was a regular dog who walked on all fours, but Mort Walker finally decided to make him more humanlike. Otto got his army uniform in the June 6, strip. Brigadier General Amos T. Halftrackâ€”the inept, frustrated, semi-alcoholic commander of Camp Swampy; introduced in He sometimes harasses his secretary, Miss Buxley. He is 78 years old, from Kenner, Louisiana â€” though according to Capt. Scabbard he was born in China April 28, She used to live in Amarillo, Texas. Lieutenant Sonny Fuzzâ€”very young with noticeably pointy eyebrows and very little facial hair , overly earnest, anal-retentive and "by the book," and highly susceptible to squeaky furniture. The apple-polishing Fuzz is always trying to impress uninterested superiors especially Halftrack , and "rub it in the noses" of his subordinates. He was introduced March 7, Mort Walker said he modeled the character and personality of Lt. Fuzz on himself, having taken himself too seriously after completing Officer Training. Originally wore an afro hairstyle. Like Sarge, he also loves food, though he is not above using Beetle as a guinea pig which Beetle loathes. Sarge, being resentful of Beetle, will find Zero so ridiculous or performing so poorly that he attacks Zero or gives Beetle the easy job just to be rid of Zero. Was briefly promoted from Private to Lieutenant during a military exercise September 29, Following the exercise, he was returned to his normal rank of E-1 Private shown in his next strip appearance on Saturday, October 12, He was raised in Cornpone, Nebraska. Plato is the only character other than Beetle to evolve from the early "college" months of the strip. Is the editor of the "Camp Swampy" Muckateer. Captain Sam Scabbard â€”hard-nosed, flat-top wearing officer; commander of A Company and usually depicted as competent. Can be firm with Sarge, but also trusts him. Major Greenbrass â€”staff officer and golf partner to Gen. Yo is most often simply a conversation partner for Sarge or one of the lieutenants. He is rarely if ever shown to be goofing off like the rest of the enlisted men. Flap wondered why Lugg was sent to the camp; Halftrack commented that she showed up after he called the Pentagon to request an overseas assignment "I asked them to send me abroad. The contest, sponsored by Dell Computer Corp. In the July 4, , strip, the entry sent in by Earl Hemminger of Springfield, Virginia, was announced as the winner from 84, entries. Snake Eyes early s "the barracks gambler, replaced by Cosmo, Rocky, and others. Big Blush early s "tall, innocent, and a great attraction to the girls; many of his characteristics incorporated into both Sarge and Zero. Fireball early s "neophyte who always seems to be in the way; forerunner of both Zero and Lt. Bammy early s "the southern patriot from Alabama who is still fighting the Civil war. Dawg early s "the guy in every barracks who creates his own pollution. Moocher early s "stingy and always borrowing things. Pop s "married private: He has pointy teeth. On at least two separate occasions, Webbing engaged Sgt. Snorkel in a cussing duel. Originally introduced in response to complaints about the constant ogling of Miss Buxley by the male characters. First appearance was in the September 9, strip, disappeared completely by the mids. When Beetle joined the Army, all of the other characters were dropped although both incarnations of the strip include a spectacled intellectual named Plato. Four characters from the original cast Bitter Bill, Diamond Jim, Freshman, and Sweatsock made at least one appearance, in the January 5, strip. He made a one-time appearance in a strip dated July 16, Neuman , [29] and various officers and civilians. Among the few to be given names is Julian, a nondescript chauffeur eventually replaced by Julius. Uncensored strip at top, censored strip in the middle. The Norwegian translation of the comic strip is shown at the bottom, to show that it was not censored in Norway. During the early s, the strip was dropped from the Tokyo edition of Stars and Stripes because it allegedly encouraged disrespect for officers. The civilian press made a huge joke of that, and the ensuing publicity gave the young strip its first big boost in circulation.
