

Chapter 1 : How To Be Your Cat's™ Best Friend | Care2 Causes

*Becoming Your Cat's Best Frnd. (Pet Friends Series) [Bill Gutman] on www.nxgvision.com FREE shipping on qualifying offers. Questions and answers explain why cats knead with their claws, what a cat's twitching tail means, and other mysteries of the feline world.*

A fertile cat can produce three litters in one year; each litter can consist of four to six kittens. Female cats and dogs should be spayed soon after the age of eight weeks. Males should be neutered at eight weeks of age, but both spaying and neutering can be done safely through most of adulthood. Spaying reduces the stress and discomfort females endure during heat periods, eliminates the risk of uterine cancer and greatly reduces the chance of mammary cancer. Neutering makes males much less likely to roam or fight, and helps prevent testicular cancer. Here are a few other basic things that you can do to make sure your cat is safe, healthy, and happy: Cats may seem independent, but they do depend on us to keep them safe. Combined with the possible dangers from unfriendly neighbors and poisonous substances and toxic antifreeze spills, the safest place for your animal companion is indoors with you. Some companies, including KittyWalk Systems <http://www.kittywalk.com>: Just be sure to use a lightweight leash attached to a harness, not a collar. Make sure your animal friend always wears proper identification in case he or she does become lost. Declawing is a painful and permanently crippling procedure that involves the amputation of the last joint of each toe, including the bones. After surgery, the nails may grow back inside the paw, causing pain. Declawing reportedly results in a gradual weakening of leg, shoulder, and back muscles, and because of impaired balance caused by the procedure, declawed cats have to relearn to walk, much as a person would after losing his or her toes. Cats have claws for a reason. Declawing robs them of the ability to scratch, a vital natural behavior, and to defend themselves. It can even make routine behaviors like using the litterbox uncomfortable. Because declawing is so inhumane, it is banned or severely restricted in nearly two dozen countries and some areas of the U. Regular trimmings, scratching posts, and nail caps like Soft Paws are effective ways to control scratching without causing your cat pain and trauma. Double-sided tape, such as Paws Off, also discourages cats from clawing furniture. You may want to try Swheat Scoop <http://www.swheat.com>: For more information about Adopt-A-Shelter-Cat-Month, and ways to help your local shelter, go to <http://www.care2.com>:

Chapter 2 : Tips to Help You Become Your Cat's Best Friend

For anyone who has a cat, it's hard not to fall in love with them once your bond has been established. Cats are loving, have the ability to read our emotions, and make us feel special with their desire to be near us whenever we are around. They say that dog's are a man's best friend, but.

Or you might be reading this from a dog only household and thinking about adopting a cat but wondering if they will get along. With a little planning, patience and advice from experienced pet parents of both cats and dogs, you will be able to bring home a new family member and after a bit of time, you will see that cats and dogs can be best friends. Create a Safe Space in a Separate Room Before you bring home your new dog or cat, create a safe space in a separate room with all the amenities your new pet will need. Make sure you provide food, water and a litter box for cats. Toys and a cat tower will help keep the new family member content during the adjustment period. Share Blankets or Towels to Introduce New Scent With your new cat or dog safely inside the separate room, your cats and dogs will get used to hearing and smelling each other without the risk of an unpleasant confrontation. This will help everyone become familiar. Love and Attention for Everyone Make sure you spend time with each dog and cat and when you think all are comfortable with their rooms, switch positions. Place your dog or cat in with the safe space room and allow your new pet to explore the outside area. They will be able to smell and hear each other through the door and this will help to further familiarize them to each other. First Face-to-Face Introduction When you feel the time is right and all pets are relaxed you can try the first face-to-face introduction. Keep your dogs on a leash for added safety. You want your dog and cat to realize that good things happen when they are together. Feed your cat and dog on their respective sides of the baby gate to keep everyone comfortable through the introduction process. When all animals seem ready, you can allow limited supervised meetings with the dogs and cats in the same space. Dogs should remain on a leash and not permitted to chase the cat. Provide your cats with escape routes by creating elevated platforms for them to get away from the dogs when desired. In most cases, your cats and dogs will accept one another and live in harmony, perhaps even become best friends. The key is to not rush the introduction and to make sure everyone is comfortable before you allow them to occupy the same space. Cats and Dogs Have Different Nutritional Needs Image from Deposit Photos Cats and dogs have their own unique nutritional needs, and each need their own food for their current life and health state. When you are introducing a new pet to the family, this is a stressful event for the new cat. Cats might share a bowl of water with a dog, but prefer really fresh flowing water. Cats also get much of the liquid they need in order to stay healthy from the food they eat. Cats and dogs both need exercise. While dogs seem more rambunctious and go out for long walks, cats can go for walks outside on a harness, enjoy climbing on cat trees, love to play hide and seek and those of us who share our homes with cats know that they love to race around the house sometimes. We can increase the love in our homes by increasing the number of homes with both cats and dogs.

Chapter 3 : How to Help Cats Become Friends: 14 Steps (with Pictures)

Becoming Your Cat's Best Friend has 5 ratings and 2 reviews. Dolly said: This is a practical book, written in simple language with fun illustrations, tha.

While we know a lot about dogs and cats, and their long history with humans, only recently is more information beginning to emerge that explores the unique relationships between cats and humans. Honestly, anyone who has ever met a cat could tell you that. Some cats even suffer from legitimate separation anxiety when their favorite humans are away. But why is it that certain cats seem to prefer one person over everyone else? Why one person over another? Skittish kitties sometimes favor someone who helps them feel secure. How do cats show affection? Proximity also can demonstrate favoritism. Some cats follow their people around the home or always choose to be near them," said Marilyn. In a study published in Current Biology in , scientists found that cats "make subtle use of one of their most characteristic vocalizations â€” purring â€” to solicit food from their human hosts, apparently exploiting sensory biases that humans have for providing care. Some mistakes humans make credit: The cats may not want to be handled or interacted with. What humans can do. They can be across the room or a few feet away. If the cat is feeling secure and social, she will advance to the outstretched finger, touch it with her nose, turn her head and rub it with her cheek. She is essentially marking the person with pheromones from scent glands on her cheeks. This is an invitation to pet her. Over hours of data was collected, leading the scientists to conclude that the same kind of behaviors are seen in cat-human relationships as are in human-human relationships. Slowly perceptions are changing about cats. There are now more studies being conducted," said Marilyn. They prefer their human companions to treat them well read: Are you ready to learn more about cats? Scroll through this article about whether or not cats remember their owners after years , and then head on over to cat-adoption hub for everything you need to know about caring for a feline of your own.

Chapter 4 : How to Get a Cat to Be Your Friend (with Pictures) - wikiHow

The independent nature of cats leads many people to believe they have very few needs and wants. But there's actually a lot you can do to enhance and enrich the daily life of your kitty.

Chapter 5 : Cat and Mouse Become Best Friends | Cat Videos

Unless your cat is in a mood, in which case you know when to give them some space. www.nxgvision.com Or they might scratch your eyes out, but we all get grumpy sometimes.

Chapter 6 : Dogs Quotes (quotes)

*Get this from a library! Becoming your cat's best friend. [Bill Gutman; Anne Canevari Green] -- Questions and answers explain why cats knead with their claws, what a cat's twitching tail means, and other mysteries of the feline world.*

Chapter 7 : Best Friend The Cat, Penny Pasta, Pet Friend Poem

*Of course, if you're extremely concerned about your upholstery, than perhaps a cat is not the best companion for you. * "Flush" Frequently: Dirty, smelly cat litter is not nice for anyone's nose, and cats don't want to walk in their waste anymore than we'd want to walk in ours!*

Chapter 8 : Cats and Dogs Can Be Best Friends #FoodShelterLove | The Tiniest Tiger Cat Community

A cat and dog being best friends is such a cute and funny video to see. We can learn from cats and dogs friendship. So check out this cat and dog friends compilation.

Chapter 9 : Becoming Your Cat's Best Friend by Bill Gutman

In this Article: Bringing Your Cat Home Making Friends With a Cat Making Friends With an Adopted or Stray Cat Understanding Cats Community Q&A Cats are a popular companion pet and can enjoy being part of a home and family. They do, however, require training to ease their interactions with people, and.