Soon it bears south out of town onto Atlantic Avenue. Chugging along the straight away down to Surfside, the train hits a modest speed, and the overgrown landscape quickens past its windows. At the coast, the tracks lead east along the shores N magazine of the Atlantic, and sea breeze washes over the freight. Indeed, duck foie gras, and the Club Car is a surviving passenger car of the railroad that once Maryland crab cakes adorn served the island. Whether feasting on shrimp scampi in the dining the plates of diners just room, or singing show tunes to live piano in the passenger car, the beginning. Others move on Club Car offers an unmatched Nantucket experience, transporting to signature entrees such you back to the island of old. No matter the occasion, a night at the Club Car becomes one to remember. After restaurant business by being consistent. Along Together, the two create a night out like no other. Plates of succulent steamed mussels, braised Belgium endive, and seared striped bass warm the air with hearty aromas. After cooking throughout the northeast, Shannon came to Nantucket, and his reputation grew while working at the Mad Hatter and The Harbor House. So when Shannon retired in , Proch swiftly put on the coat of Chef de Cuisine. While bringing his own flair to the menu, Proch maintains many of the staples established by his predecessor. Sipping martinis and toasting to the good life, patrons join pianists Brian Busch and Anthony Healy in an assortment of modern hits and classic show tunes. The two carry on the work of gifted performer Scott Olson. At the turn of the 19th Century, the Nantucket Railroad delivered the island from a rough-neck fishing community to a gentrified vacation destination. The passenger car on Main Street is a relic of that formative past. Families who work hard. Families who play hard. Families who want the best for themselves and their children. Families who know that successful asset management is a full-time job. Offices in New York and Nantucket, serving families worldwide! On Macy Lane, a light shines out from the darkness of the off season. Combining the best aspects of tennis and squash, paddle tennis is a racquet sport that is ideally suited for winter weather. The courts resemble those used for tennis, only half the size. Surrounding chicken wire fences function like the walls of a squash court, keeping the ball in play and making for longer volleys. Using short wooden paddles, players hit a spongy ball and N magazine points are scored in the same way as with tennis, except players are allowed only one serve. Players dress in layers to combat the cold. For over sneakers and shuttering chicken wire, game time paddle twenty years, the Paddle Tennis Club has welcomed jargon fills the air: Free clinics are offered You got! Let it to beginners, and private lessons are available with club go through! Friday nights, the Club hosts weather, the game goes on. When ice coats the pick-up games. Throughout the winter, tournaments are court, inlaid heaters melt it away. Competition is not limited to advanced players, these matches from taking place. The lighthearted rivalries and the camaraderie keep players Many regulars on Macy Lane earn nicknames over the coming out into the cold, night after night. Who knows, paddle tennis may even make you look forward to winter! N magazine For anyone interested in joining the club, there is open house on Saturday, November 27th, from 9: Bow hunters, however, yearn for opening day of bow season October 18th with the same excited anticipation of students counting down the days til summer vacation. Men such as Ed Conrad, Kevin Madden and Jeff Osmer long for the solitude of Nantucket in the late fall when they stalk deer in the predawn hours. And I have the best seat in the house. Nothing else in life compares. Hunting platforms often sit some eighteen feet off the ground, and ten yards away from the paths. For up the best seat in to four hours, hunters will sit in a perch silently awaiting their prey to pass through. According to Conrad, most hunters have between ten and twenty stands the house. Nothing else spread around the island. They guard their secret locations fiercely. The streams and the woods belong. Men like Osmer and Conrad are bow-hunters keep that time-honored the last link to Nantucket hunters from the tradition alive. We really want to blend in and become a part of the forest. Best way to ruin that is to tell people where you are going because they will start showing up. You had to put in the practice all year to hone your shot. You have to wear the right camo, and be still as a post. In these uncertain economic times, bow hunters take great pride in living off of the land. I would Image by Dr. Greg Hinson guess that I eat better than mostâ€¦ I eat deer probably meals a

Nine out of ten boys hunted relationship with the land and its animals that back then. It was just a way of life. It sits slowly aging on a scaffold three levels up and three rows back, to be exact. In six-and-a-half years or more, it may become one of the best Scotch-like whiskies in the world. As only whiskies made in Scotland can be labeled Scotch, island distillers named this Nantucket-born whiskey Notch. How much bottled Notch is out on the market right now? How do you get your flavors? We only sell it here, and the first bottling was a total of A lot of it comes from the type of barley. They started in the states but their family was malsters N: What does a bottle of Notch retail for? They do say flavor is also all about the water used from different places. For instance distilleries located closer to the N: What are the ingredients in Notch and how did it start? The ingredients are just malted barley, water and yeast. I think that plays a factor. So what do you use for your barrels? All the barrels are white oak, American oak. It used to be N: So I know you enlisted the expertise of a Scot to come over whatever we could get our hands on; we got Jim Beam barrels, and set this up. In the last few years from England helped us. We would have been just biggest distillery in the country. He got us started, helped us fine tune a little bit, gave us some great pointers, N magazine and removed some of the mystery. What was the blend you made with him this summer? We took the barrels through and he sampled all enough. I think that it just depends on the makeup of the of them with us. The next bottling Pickers Blend which he will stamp and sign. The rest we will that we worked on with John Ramsey we had 24 or 25 barrels marry together and put back into barrels to age longer. So you made a blend with John Ramsey? Yes, he was the master blender for Macallan until last He was nominated as whiskey man of Notch, and different levels of Notch. It will probably be more the year. I saw him at the international whiskey festival, and select barrels like last year for the Gold Notch. He talked about different blends and that we need to have tiers or levels N: And what can I expect from my barrel of Notch? Whiskey Bible by Jim Murray. We scored a
