Biography Who am I? I like toys, odd musical instruments, skiing and tennis. I drive a Jeep. I was born in Paris, Texas , in and began playing around on the family piano at the age of four. My parents quickly got me lessons, and I soon began making my own little songs. The first piece was a little ditty called "Ghost Dance. I played the French horn in middle and high school marching band. In front of a mirror, I practiced conducting with a magic wand to a collection of Leonard Bernstein records my parents gave me. I continued playing piano and later bought some drums. Of course, yes, I was in a couple of high school garage bands. Attending the University of Texas in Austin, I failed to impress the music panel with my piano playing, so I received a nice letter informing me that I was not accepted into the School of Music and "should consider another career path. While in college, I had the good fortune to secure a summer internship at Disney Studios in their film music department. After two years, I moved to Disney Music Publishing and managed their print music division. In , I began freelance work: I authored more than 25 instrumental method books, including the best-selling piano method, " Piano for Dummies ," and the award-winning series, "FastTrack Music Instruction. His guidance, loyalty and introduction to the world of film music put me where I am today. In , composer Vangelis hired me to orchestrate and conduct a large-scale oratorio of his called "Mythodea,". During this time, I also pursued composing through my concert works, having premieres here and there and winning some small composition awards and commissions. But my big break came in when Greg Berlanti took a chance and hired me to score his television series "Everwood," for the WB. In its first year, I was honored with my first Emmy nomination for my main title theme. My success with "Everwood," led to many more television and film projects. I enjoy what I do. I hope you enjoy what I write. The cow on the wall is a large carved teak wood longhorn head that hangs in my studio. I was around them a lot.
