Welcome to Chuck Murphy's BoyWithCamera photo galleries.. Although I've been taking photos for many decades, it's still as much of a thrill as when I was a kid. Hence, "Boy with Camera.

This can be used in a number of creative ways. For example, it could be used for creating a game where a player can go from one photo of a room in a house to another by pressing certain spots on the photos. The location of the hot-spots are customizable by accessing the Special menu via the Select options and choosing "Hot-Spot". In this mode, up to five one-eyed blobs can be placed on each picture, which become invisible hot-spots during "Hot-Spot" mode. Each blob can be programmed to send the player to a different photo and include a visual transition and a sound effect. Then, in Hot-Spot mode, when the player presses one of the hot-spots, he or she will be sent to a photo of another room, where additional hot-spots will send the player to additional photos, and move him or her throughout the virtual house. The Japanese version of the device is optionally integrated into the Mario Artist suite of multimedia games for the 64DD peripheral. Users can create drawn and 3D-animated avatars of themselves based on photographs taken with the camera. Please help improve this article by adding citations to reliable sources. December Learn how and when to remove this template message Play is a built-in Space Fever II minigame, [5] which is the sequel to the Space Fever arcade game created by Nintendo. At the beginning of the game, two spaceships appear, one marked with a "B" and one with a "D". Shooting the "B" ship will send players to the Ball minigame. Shooting the "D" ship will send players to DJ mode, an open-ended music video game. By avoiding both of the ships, the player will begin playing Space Fever II. Once unlocked, a new ship marked with a "?" Ball is a juggling game, in which the player moves his or her hand around to catch and throw balls. The background music to this game is " Mayim Mayim ," an Israeli folk song. DJ is a music sequencer known as Trippy-H where players can mix and create their own simple chiptunes. The "Game Face" is the DJ. In this minigame, the player controls a spaceship which fires missiles at other ships throughout three unique levels, followed by a boss at the end of each level. The first boss is a giant face of a man with horns, the second boss is a giant face of a mustachioed man, and the third boss is the "Game Face". Once all three of the bosses are beaten, the cycle will start over again, only harder. The "Game Face" is attached to a cartoon body, and the player races against a mole and a bird for the finish line. By clearing this minigame in under 22 seconds, the credits are unlocked. If the "Run" button was pressed while the user was on one of menu screens, the game would sometimes freeze, and an image of a "vandalized" face would appear with the text "Who are you running from? Also, mainly during the game whenever it errors another vandalized image will appear with a disconcerting dooming 8 bit tone usually startling the viewers. The international version of the game had three such faces, that would appear during different times, such as after system errors. The Japanese version had two faces different from the international version, including a young girl who is the daughter of one of the developers, with one face being the same between versions. The Japanese version read "How weak! While taking a picture, if any button on the D-pad is pressed rapidly, the color palette would flip, causing white to become black, and vice versa on the monochrome 4 color screen. This is complete with the sound effect of a car honking. However, Kuwahara approached Creatures, Inc. President Hirokazu Tanaka regarding the development of the software for the device, which solidified the project. In Banjo-Tooie , Chris P. Bacon uses a Game Boy Camera to take pictures. The Game Boy camera remains a popular device for photography and people constantly find new ways to get more out of this camera. A few examples are Color Photography achieved by using filters Astrophotography achieved by attaching a Game boy camera to a telescope. Foto enhancement by using a neural network. Photo transfer[ edit ] The Game Boy Camera requires additional devices to transfer photos. Photos can be saved and edited using a videocassette recorder or TV tuner card.

Chapter 2 : Boy A () - IMDb

The Boy with a Camera for a Face is a satirical fairy tale about a boy born with a camera instead of a head. We follow him from his birth through to adulthood, and experience his inability to live a normal life, as every moment of his existence is transformed by the fact that he is recording it.

I know all about you. I never knew all the odd stuff I could do was magic till I got the letter from Hogwarts. He was a big fan of the famous Harry Potter , who was a year ahead of him in school. He was known for taking several pictures of Harry and other students. Colin was continually awestruck at everything to do with the wizarding world. Colin had a younger brother named Dennis, who was also a wizard, an unusual thing to occur for two magical offspring to come from Muggle parents. Hogwarts years Colin: Can you turn him around, Harry? Get out of the way! He was sorted into Gryffindor. He was very frequently seen in Hogwarts with a camera , worshipping the ground that Harry Potter walked on. At one point he asked for an autographed photo of Harry, prompting Draco Malfoy to tell everyone Harry was giving out signed photos. Colin responded by accusing Malfoy of being jealous. He was also amazed that he could take moving pictures. Harry tried to stop him by claiming it was "boring" but Colin went along nevertheless. Colin kept asking more questions the whole way, until Harry managed to shake him off at the changing rooms. Colin later attended the Quidditch match between Gryffindor and Slytherin , where he clicked his camera non-stop. He inappropriately took photos of Harry, while he was lying injured in the mud even though Harry told him not to. When he saw Harry lose the bones in his broken arm thanks to Lockhart, began taking even more pictures excitedly. Hey " you can come and sit with us, if you like, Harry! Colin was among the students that stayed behind at the castle as he was too young whilst the other students visited Hogsmeade. He stayed behind along with Harry Potter , who had not had his permission slip for Hogsmeade signed. In an effort to avoid Colin, Harry lied and said he needed to return a book to the library. Third year "Harry, guess what? Keep your fingers crossed, eh, Harry? Dennis looked at Colin as he walked up to the chair, gave him two thumbs up and whispered that he had fallen from the boat on the way across the lake. When Dennis told him something pulled him from the lake, Colin responded that it was probably the giant squid. Colin was delighted when Dennis was sorted into the same house. This would cause unsettlement for Colin and his brother Dennis as Voldemort loathed muggle-borns and with rumours of his rise to power upcoming it was likely to scare him. Fourth year "Is it OK if I bring my camera? One of the D. Colin and his brother both attended the first meeting of the D. Colin and his brother Dennis both joined this alliance and were taught defensive magic by Harry; during their meetings he and his brother were regarded as being erratic, causing several books to fly off bookshelves during practise. After three meetings, he managed to master the Impediment Jinx. Fifth year Not a lot is known about what happened to Colin during his fifth year, however when Death Eaters entered Hogwarts and the Battle of the Astronomy Tower struck, Hermione Granger called all D. Whether he intentionally stayed out of battle or if it was because he no longer carried his coin is unknown. It is likely that Colin stayed for the funeral of Albus Dumbledore , showing his respects to the late headmaster as there was no mention of Colin attempting to take photographs during the procession like he normally would in a situation of some sort. It is also likely that the Creeveys went into hiding as there was a Muggle-Born Registration Commission running where any Muggle-born wizards or witches were to be put on trial regarding how they came to possess a wand. Battle of Hogwarts and Death "Then Neville nearly walked into him. He was one half of a pair that was carrying a body in from the grounds. Harry glanced down, and felt another dull blow to his stomach: Colin Creevey, though underage, must have sneaked back just as Malfoy, Crabbe, and Goyle had done. He was tiny in death. Minerva McGonagall dismissed him from the castle for being underage , however Colin must have returned and participated in the Battle of Hogwarts. He fought during the first half of the battle and likely did so outside the castle, as his body was recovered outside the Great Hall by Neville Longbottom and Oliver Wood. He was placed in the Great Hall alongside the others that had fallen in the battle. Lord Voldemort also met his death at the hands of Harry Potter once and for all, thus ending the Second Wizarding War. Physical appearance Colin was described as being much shorter than Harry Potter. He had mousy brown hair and brown eyes. Personality and traits Colin was a person who was very easily excited. When he first came into Hogwarts, he was excited about everything. He was also a fan of some wizarding "celebrities", such as Harry Potter and Gilderoy Lockhart. The night he was attacked by the basilisk he was presumed to be trying to sneak into the hospital wing to visit Harry. During the Triwizard Tournament he and his brother tried to bewitch a number of "Potter Stinks" badges to support Harry, which backfired as they only made the badges say "Potter Really Stinks". This hero worship may have reached its peak when he returned to Hogwarts despite not being a student anymore to help defend it against the forces of Lord Voldemort. He always took pictures in his first year, which could lead to him being often annoying. This was partly due to him taking pictures at inopportune moments, such as when Ron was belching slugs and Harry lost the bones in his arm. It was due to this behaviour that some assumed he had been chosen for an attack by the monster in the Chamber of Secrets. Colin was also brave, as he fought at the Battle of Hogwarts against Lord Voldemort and his Death Eaters, even he was outright not allowed by Professor McGonagall, which he defied by sneaking back in, and was killed during the battle. Magical abilities and skills Defence Against the Dark Arts: Colin had at least some skill in Defence Against the Dark Arts. Colin was considered a skilled photographer. Despite coming from a Muggle family, he quickly adapted to the wizarding method of producing photographs, creating moving photos in his first year. He uses this camera during his first year at Hogwarts. He liked to take pictures of Harry Potter. Relationships Family Colin possibly had a good relationship with his family. His father was a milkman. Colin stated that his parents were very excited that their son was a wizard, and Colin wanted to take some photos of Hogwarts, in order to show to his father. Colin was also very close with his brother, Dennis, and was also excited when Dennis came to Hogwarts, too, and was sorted into Gryffindor house. When Colin was killed during the Battle of Hogwarts, his family was devastated. During his first year at Hogwarts, he took many pictures of Harry. This implies that Harry grew to care for Colin despite his initial annoyance of him during their time as members of D. Colin had a good relationship with the most of them, including Ron Weasley, Hermione Granger, and Ginny Weasley, who was also in his year. Other members of the army were.
