Chapter 1 : Wardrobe Essentials : 10 Pieces Every Man Should Own - Iron and Tweed

The Affordable Wardrobe Guide Are you a young man looking to build a respectable casual wardrobe? Maybe you're in high school, college, or just starting out in the workforce and need to stick to a budget.

My three goals are to 1 outline the basic principles of dressing well and starting a wardrobe, 2 provide some suggestions for what basic items to buy with a focus on affordability and availability , and 3 list some additional resources for learning more. But before diving in, two quick things to note. Basic Principles My general recommendations for building a basic, starter wardrobe are: The How Clothes Should Fit guide in the sidebar is an excellent resource, but the quickest rules of thumb are that shoulder seams should sit at the top of your natural shoulder instead of drooping down your arms, pants should stay up without a belt, and clothes should follow the lines of your body without being excessively tight or baggy. A few pairs of pants and a handful of shirts can be combined and recombined into a massive number of outfits. In fact, building a versatile wardrobe instead of buying distinct outfits is one of the most frugal decisions you can make. Frankly, simply wearing well-fitting basics is going to set you apart from the crowd. Roll up the sleeves to wear them more casually, keep them rolled down for business casual. For a basic wardrobe, I recommend avoiding black shirts even tees and short-sleeve button-up shirts. See the guide to shirts on the sidebar for more info. Pants

For the spring and summer, the core items in a casual wardrobe are jeans and chinos. Depending on where you live and how you feel about them, shorts are useful too. Jacket - Depending on where you live, a lightweight rain jacket Uniqlo , Penfield or pullover anorak LL Bean might be worth investing in. Even a classic tan trench coat if your style leans dressier [http: All of them can be worn sockless or with no-show loafer socks. When you get closer to the business casual end of the spectrum, a pair of brown captoes or wingtips are workhorses Allen Edmonds , Stafford. Accessories

Other things you may want to invest in are sunglasses Wayfarers, Clubmasters, aviators, or knockoffs from mall kiosks , a watch Timex Weekender , Seiko 5 , ties 2. Crew , Uniqlo , and cardigans Uniqlo , Target are all basics worth considering. See the pants guide on the sidebar for more. Outerwear

What you need obviously depends on region, but a peacoat in charcoal or navy is hard to do wrong Schott , J. You can buy cheap versions of these coats at places like Target, but if warmth is your goal, outerwear is something worth investing in.

Chapter 2 : Dappered " Affordable Men's Style

Every man's wardrobe should be built around a few quality staples. These items shouldn't be too trendy or they'll have to be replaced frequently. For example, the baggy, oversized suits from the 90's or the painted-on-skinny version from the following decade make someone look "fashionable.

Apr 21, It is a fact that fashion can be very expensive but not style. You can easily dress up very nicely without spending all your money. The big brands know that now customers are smarter and they must produce high quality products for less. With the growth of new fashion brands, the winners are those who can please their customers. Zara is a big example of this. Zara is one of the of largest retailers in the planet and they sell their clothes for a very good price. So my point is that, like Zara, there are many other fashion brands with this same mentality, and unless you have the money and you like to buy luxury items from certain brands, there is no reason for you to go over budget and spend all your money on clothes. And in the case that you do prefer to buy from luxury brands but you are on a budget, choosing the right items will be key in order to create an affordable versatile wardrobe. So as you can see, either way we have to be smart in the way we shop. With that in mind, I want to show you what I believe to be the must have items, or the first basic ones, that you should buy to revamp your style.

White Shirt You need one item that you will wear a lot, with unlimited number of outfits, and will never be out of fashion; this item would be our life saving white shirt. When I say unlimited outfits I really mean it and I am talking about casual, dress up, with tie or a beanie; this is what I call a true must have! This is the best one: You will see guys like David Beckham wearing a white shirt many times in a roll because it is just easier to wear; Not to mention Karl Lagerfeld or Tom Ford. Choosing the right denim is just as important as choosing the rest of your outfit. Denim jeans should work as the support for your outfit and not the center of attention. You should worry more about the fitting rather than the color of it. I always think a darker color looks better than a lighter one. A darker denim will also match more types of outfits than a lighter one; but it is always good to have a light denim in your wardrobe as a backup. I would suggest you go with a slim fit denim because it just looks better and more modern. Whenever you see him, he is wearing one of these guys; even with a suit. There is nothing easier than pairing white sneakers with your outfit; if you can wear it with a suit you can wear it with anything. My favorite white sneakers are the Vans , common projects and the Adidas Stan Smith. By the way, follow Aleks Musika on instagram for some white sneaker inspiration. Buy the right Suit When you are on a budget you need to buy the clothes that will be easy to wear and will be very versatile. In the Suit case, that would be the gray suit. In my opinion, one of the smartest episodes from GQ. In the video they show how to pack for a trip without taking a lot of stuff. And surprisingly the Gray suit was there. It is really cool to see the many looks you can get from the same suit. You can go from business outfit to casual just by adding for example some dark denim jeans. This is definitely my favorite episode from GQ! No More Printed t-shirt Talking about gray you can use the same rule with t-shirts. If you want to look stylish, the basic will be your best choice. Feel free to wear colored tees like yellow, red, orange but your must have will be the black, white or Gray. Take a look at Scott Disick; how many t-shirt colors does a millionaire need? With only a cheap gray t-shirt you will be able to throw in many outfits without no one noticing it. It is not just a classic shoe, it is also very versatile and easy to wear. Wear it for a business meeting, take out the socks for a casual outfit, put on shorts and enjoy a sunny day. It works for every look. You can also find loafers for a very good price. By the way, if it is your first acquisition, go for a brown color rather than black. Final Words You see, without spending a lot of money you can change your whole wardrobe. The trick is to buy the right items that you will be able to wear a lot. What was your favorite?

Wardrobe Basics Checklist To get the most from this wardrobe staple, select a style made of an all-season fabric, like tropical wool or viscose. For a casual.

Quite often, these staple pieces get better with age, so investing in quality from the beginning is almost always a good idea. Here are 10 of my most loved pieces that helped me to elevate my style in a variety of situations. They instantly dress up a casual look and can give a suit a more laid-back feel. I prefer these in light blue or with a subtle stripe to maximize versatility. Crisp White Shirt Completes the refined look with your suit or can be worn with jeans and a blazer for that smart casual look. Cardigans are another piece that can have all of the comfort and ease of their less formal counterparts but give one a put together look. Buttons up the front make taking it on and off a breeze, perfect for those buildings that have their thermostats set to Sahara. I prefer a shawl neck as I find it enhances my physique rather than detract from. The extra roll of fabric gives the illusion of taller traps where as the standard cardigan creates the look of slouchy shoulders. You can get a nice affordable option from Target. Dark Denim Pre-distressed denim makes me cringe. Denim that was bought raw not distressed and broken-in naturally tells a story of love and adventure. Not really, but you get the idea. Also, no leather blazers or trench coats. Adding a leather jacket is a sure fire way to inject some badass style, and confidence, into any outfit. You can take a proper pairing of oxfords, gray trousers, and a crisp shirt and tie from school boy to rebel in one step with this single piece. Choose brown or black based on personal preference. Navy Blazer In some cases you can wear the suit jacket separately, but I find having a blazer made of less formal fabric with softer construction helps bridge the gap between casual and formal. My favorite outfits are the ones that are dressed up based on garment style but casual based on fabric and combination. Boat Shoes As comfortable as slippers. As cool and easy as flip-flops. This is my everyday shoe from spring until autumn. Sperry make the perfect pair. Wingtips Equally at home with jeans as with a suit. Appropriate in all but the most formal occasions. You can wear them to an interview then out to the pub after. Brown is more casual and can develop a wonderful patina while black looks more elegant. I also plan on featuring each of these pieces separately to illustrate their flexibility and to give a little more advice on fit, fabric, color, and pairing options. So, what say you?
