The Taylor Matthews Foundation is dedicated to raising awareness and funding pediatric cancer research. We fund cutting-edge, innovative research that reaches sick children now. It is our mission that children with cancer will live long, healthy, and productive lives.

Keep your eyes on our blog over the next twelve days to meet our Wise Women during the 12DaysofWiseWomen series! For me, being Italian means love of life, love of my family and friends, love of the beauty of Italy, its history, hospitality and culture. Italy will never be a conventional country. Because Italy is Italy. I grew up in an Italian American family. I am an Italian who cannot speak Italian, which I attribute to being tone deaf. Our gestures and body language express how we feel. When I enter Italy and show my passport, the Italians immediately speak to me rapid-fire. Language is an emotional response. Love is expressed through body language. Italians are unquestionably known for their food, which is a reason to gather, celebrate and enjoy the moments of life. Food nourishes both the body and the soul. On Sundays, a day we all looked forward to, our family would gather to share a long, abundant, delicious meal with Italian wine for the purpose of celebrating life with our loved ones. Now I have tried to pass this tradition to my children. In the fast-paced world we live in, it is difficult to gather the whole family at the same time need I mention that I am the only Italian in the family that is not a good cook? Italy sits in the middle of the Mediterranean. Some call it the high-heeled boot. From a map it is as easily recognizable as a Louboutin shoe sporting its red sole. We live openly, love openly and give openly. I could not be more proud! Recently my daughters and I became Italian citizens. I am very proud to be leaving behind a legacy. Every generation of grandchildren and great grandchildren will inherit our Italian citizenship. The meaning of that cannot be described in words. Chapter 2 : CURE™s Kids Conquer Cancer | The Bluebird Patch

Conquering Kids and cancer. I'm Black Bold and Beautiful, I have the proof. Black Bold and Beautiful is a women's lunch held every year to celebrate Indigenous women in the greater Brisbane area.

By proudblacksista Christmas is over, the presents given and opened, the food and the cheer shared. The Christmas candle burned so brightly this year as we all joined together for a very hot fuss free day. I am truly blessed to have a roof over my head, food on the table and my children around me for this time of year even if we fuss and fight. We reminisced about past Christmas times, what were the best and the worst over the years. Every one had different ideas of what was good and what was bad. What presents suck and what rocked. Second daughter loved Christmas in Hervey Bay, with her Pop and all the family, quiet morning at home, Christmas lunch and then the afternoon filled with cousins aunts and uncles, she loved it. The fun of those services, kids dressing up and recreating the Nativity. My Son hates Christmas, he always has, so this year he was actually in a good mood, there was no all sitting around together to open presents and no one was to wake anyone up so they could raid the tree. Yes for him, sleeping in until 12 wandering out and opening presents, no small talk, suited him. There was no competition for worst Christmas, they seemed to involve being away from home and hearth and spending holidays with the father. These irregular times when their father would make an effort, had a huge toll on the kids. Funny that he lived in near us for a couple of years and never bothered with seeing his kids, until the son wanted to live there. But that is a story for another day, let us continue with our Christmases. The only agreement on these times were that things were better when they got to see their grandfather, they love him He is a good man, I respect him a lot. They always wanted more time with him. The only other worst Christmas was when I was really sick, we had no tree, because of immunity issues, so we used the hat tree. It was the worst but for me it was very special, because it was supposed to be my last Christmas. We laughed about how when 2nd daughter, cried with joy at a little unicorn box given to me, she cried and thanked everyone, kissed everyone and sat down hugging it, needless to say, the little box became hers and she still has it. One Christmas holidays 2nd daughter and son spent with their father, they came home with gift cards for all. The littlest child's gift cards in an envelope and card. My Son said father said they can spend them in Brisbane, better variety of stores than Alice Springs, which was true there was only a Kmart in town for things like that. A day later I take the kids to do their Christmas shopping. I assumed he has spent it in Alice and forgot. The littlest one came forth with her card, still attached to the original tag, her card was unusable as well. We had a big problem, no card would work. I tried another card they had that could be used there. I told the kids, there must be a mix up and we will go to the other department store and try the cards from that shop. All cards had been used. I asked when the cards had been activated and used, no surprises the cards were used before my kids even went to visit their father.
