Must-read romances of Joyce Lamb December 31, Here, in no particular order, are the romances that former HEA contributor Michelle Monkou recommended this year. Some of the books might be from , but they were recommended in A bountiful buffet of twisted, dark intrigue. Reading this book takes you to the depths of the stinking basement of asylum hell and squeezes every emotion from you, as the parade of adults march through, displaying disgusting ranges of human imperfection. Forget Tomorrow by Pintip Dunn. This debut is a page-turner full of adventure and danger. Dunn pushes Calla to her limits without holding back and without crippling her with fear. Calla constantly faces choices, and instead of taking the easy way, she stays true to her cause despite the dangers. With another installment, we can be thrilled to have a sexy couple fulfill their passionate desires, despite the hurts that run deep. Jackson has a knack for teasing the heartstrings to surrender to love, romance and sexy fun, while allowing her writing to do the rest to wrap you in a cozy, warm, feel-good story. Enjoyable from beginning to end. I Heard a Rumor by Cheris Hodges. This one begins with the characters standing deep in drama higher than their knees. Neither Chante nor Zach is unscathed by the actions and mistreatment from their former lovers. The pain, beautifully written, is there for us to understand and feel, alongside this couple. Hodges writes strong characters who are up to the challenge for the trials they will encounter and endure to be happy. The arc of their development comes edged with feisty stubbornness and a bit of humor to round out the sharp angles. Once again, she delivers a winner for a great romantic read. The Queen by Tiffany Reisz. I came in on this last book in the Original Sinners series No. Good news, though, the Reisz-aholics can rest assured that another one has been added to the circle. If The Queen is the initiation, then may I have another, please? The plot is not a straight line from A to Z. And yet, she draws the stories â€” revelations, secrets, histories â€” back to the center and ties it up with a neat bow as a wonderful gift to her readers. This Tender Melody by Kianna Alexander. Alexander creates a world where romance is begging to be acknowledged, if only its people can get it together. Descriptive and sensual, the story details draw you in to sit and enjoy and swoon over the hunky hero. Alexander delivers, not only with the story, but also with the touching and healing bonds of true love. Sexy and unforgettable, This Tender Melody is worthy of celebration. Binti by Nnedi Okorafor. Binti is a compact gem of adventure, bravery and other worlds. And the heroine, Binti, invites us along to participate in her secret mission. From the start she is special and destined for greater things, but without knowing the tests that will challenge her resilience. As a result, her heroism and vulnerabilities grab our attention, holding tight until the end. The Fifth Season by N. Journeys abound in The Fifth Season. There is the literal journey from one place to another filled with danger and the unknown. There is journey to self-discovery and enlightenment that comes with dire consequences. There is journey through time where destruction and rebirth coexist. The world rages on its own rhythms and for its own purpose. Beautifully fleshed out in descriptive detail, this unique world plays an integral part with its occupants. And what a story! Whatever your state of mind at the beginning of The Fifth Season, I guarantee that by the end, you will not be in the same space. The central character makes all the difference in the world. She is a force to be reckoned with, strong, intelligent and determined â€” warms my heart. When We Were One by Zaji. Her story is a celebration of sisterhood and their connection with the physical world and beyond. As the first in the series, the story wonderfully gives us the boundaries that make up this world. With a culture and way of life in crisis, we feel the pain and threat that affect its people. Congratulations to Zaji on her first of hopefully many books. Captured by Terri J. First in the Love and Faith series. This debut is loaded with suspense along with the romance between two passionate and dedicated individuals â€” Will and Savannah. Knowing the reason behind their motivation endears them as two heroes, each in his and her way. Haynes does a great job of

writing this determined couple who must fight a multitude of obstacles, including the unpleasantness of their former relationships, to achieve their goals. The Seventh District by Stacy-Deanne. She is the anchor in the story about betrayal and family secrets. As she struggles with her new self, she must also face what or who she wants in her life. The Balm of Love by Nikki Walker. The dramatic saga of these friends and family around the Serenity Inn series continues. This time, Eleanor and Terry are face-to-face in an expected situation that provides the perfect opportunity for reflection on the verge of their divorce. Faith and persistence carry them through the darkness, and vulnerabilities are laid bare for judgment but also for forgiveness. The adventure begins without delay and with tight writing to keep up the momentum. The reader has another opportunity to get to know Jamie, who is no wallflower, except to her father. Loved the interaction between the two, which underscores the emotional conflict experienced by Jamie. She understands how to keep her readers riveted from beginning to end. The Kill Box by Nichole Christoff. This is a nail-biter to the end – almost the very end. Adam and Jamie carry their torches for the tortured souls like proud ambassadors. Thick Love by Eden Butler. Lost Treasure by Paige Prince. With an interesting whodunit storyline, along with a race against time and countries to find the stolen treasure, suspense is high and the romance is spicy-HAWT to make things interesting. Grown and sexy describes this couple who have already had a taste of adult life. Malcolm has been married, now divorced, and has twin daughters who are a handful. Setting up these characters on either side of the spectrum launches the book with great major conflict and big hurdles to climb. This upper YA story comes power-packed with a cast of misfits and those who think they fit into the world called life. With the small-town setting, the closed-in feeling of no escape is wonderfully portrayed with splashes of true-life scenarios and people, heightening the desperation felt by Willowdean. The authors deliver with various bad alphas at the ready. From wolves to dragons to tigers to pumas and more, the shifters in these stories are deliciously bad, but oh-so-good, sexy and unapologetic. Overall, the anthology is strong and sticks to the central theme of the bad alpha. Each author steps up with creative ways to showcase their alpha leading their clan or pack, while danger nips at their heels. The heat level is a scorcher, as it should be. Man Love Edition anthology. These stories are emotional and reach for the heartstrings as the characters tumble into their happy ever afters. Each story has its unique platform and its own brand of intensity to raise the level on eroticism. Shifter problems are plentiful with deadly consequences when the alphas are crossed. The danger mixed with the romance makes for a fiery combo. Enjoyable to the last line. This one has a bit of suspense and lots of sexy. Thanks to a drop-dead gorgeous hero and beautiful, intelligent heroine, the story reads with snappy dialogue and tons of sizzle. Another sexy alpha for us to fall for and enjoy. Under the Lights by Dahlia Adler. Book two in the Daylight Falls is the source material for a great YA sitcom. The cast is bold, lovable, obnoxious and irritating as they face their goals and fears. More important, they work well together, sometimes bringing out the best or revealing the worst sides of each other. And that interaction and fluid movement within this circle of friendship anchor the story. There are lots of elements to this story that I found praiseworthy.

If you are a romance reader who follows blogs, visits Facebook, or reads tweets tremendous and trivial, you know that the 30th annual conference of the Romance Writers of America is being held this week in Orlando a change of venue due to the devastating floods in Nashville in early May. I may never attend one. I do, however, enjoy the conference vicariously, and thanks to the miracle of social media, I can indirectly participate in it from shopping for conference clothes to making the exhausting trip home. I spent way too much time Monday reading about the number of shoes RWA attendees were packing. The record among the tweets I read was nine pairs. Tuesday I followed comments from the early arrivals. The excitement was so potent that it almost transcended the virtual and became palpable at times. More than authors from A to Y no Zs on the list signed books for eager fans. The proceeds from all the books sold during the two-hour event go to ProLiteracy Worldwide. But newer lights in the Romance Fiction Galaxy got attention too. I have been enjoying the photos of the signing and other moments that friends and strangers are sharing. Stopping by The Romance Dish every day to read dishly updates is part of my routine, and I know I can count on PJ and the others to have great photos. Do I sound obsessed? You know those ballots for the entertainment awards you always see in magazines like TV Guide, Entertainment Weekly, and People? I confess that looking over the list also makes me aware of books not on the list that I think belong with these that will be deemed the most excellent of Probably every romance fiction fan has a few favorites she thinks deserved to be included. By Sunday, my vicarious conference experience will have left me almost as tired as if I had actually spent most of the week in Orlando. Have you been following the news from Nationals? Have you ever attended a conference? Are you planning to attend one? How many of the nominated books have you read? Do you have RITA favorites? The list of finalists is posted below. Are there books missing from the finalists that you wanted to see among them? Or are you indifferent to the whole conference topic and looking forward to Romancelandia settling into its usual routine? And how many pairs of shoes would you take to the conference?
