Born in Luton, England. Worked as a teacher and midwife. British mystery novelist Christine Green has published numerous books, beginning in with Deadly Errand, the first installment in her "Kate Kinsella" series. After receiving her medical training in London, Green started her nursing career at a hospital north of the city and subsequently spent thirty years in the profession before turning her full attentions to writing. Much of her writing is based on her experiences during the years she spent as a nurse, and most of her novels are set in hospitals or other medical facilities. During her career, Green has developed three series of novels. Most of her books, including Deadly Errand, feature protagonist Kate Kinsella, a English nurse turned private detective who solves crimes of a medical nature. In Deadly Errand, the thirty-something Kinsella is hired to solve the murder of nurse Jacky Byfield, who is stabbed to death while working at an English hospital. For example, a contributor to Publishers Weekly called it a "lively and impressive debut. The story finds Kinsella running the Medical and Nursing Investigation Agency, but having trouble paying the rent. She accepts a case in which she must solve the disappearance of Nigel Carter, a rich hotel owner, who is despised by many and missed by few. The pair is an unlikely duo: Although the book received mixed reviews, critic Jenny McLarin of Booklist called it "another in a long line of successful British procedurals starring mismatched but oddly complementary cops. In Deadly Echo, published in , Kinsella is walking her dog, Jasper, when the dog discovers a frightened woman out in the rain. Kinsella brings the drenched woman back to her apartment and soon finds herself trying to determine who is after Megan Thomas and why. Emily Melton commented in Booklist: Deadly Night finds Kinsella and her landlord and undertaker Humberstone on the case of women who are being raped and sometimes murdered after Humberstone discovers bruises on an elderly woman he is readying for burial. Emily Melton wrote in Booklist that "this entry in the series is perhaps the best so far. Decker-White doubts that her husband died accidentally, as the police have declared. As a result, Kate hires on at the Fair Acres private house where the man worked to discover if he was really murdered. In the meantime, Kinsella is also dealing with the shock of discovering that her friend Humberstone is planning to marry an American woman he met on the Internet. At the suggestion of a friend, Kinsella goes on a retreat where she is cut off from the outside world without phones, newspapers, or television. Once there, she meets another guest, an ex-lawyer named Fran Rowley who has just served six years in prison for killing her infant child. Kinsella becomes convinced that Rowley is innocent, even though the lawyer confessed despite the fact that she had no recollection of committing the crime. In addition, Kinsella thinks the real murderer of the child is still running free. Emily Melton wrote in Booklist that "Kate is definitely charismatic. Kirkus Reviews, February 1, , review of Deadly Echo, p. Library Journal, July, , Rex E.
