An Essay on Plastic Surgery. 1, words. 2 pages. A Description of Mankind's Essential Nature Which Entails Self-Improvement and Perfection. 1, words. 3 pages.

But it appears that we are going to have to adapt ourselves to a society where humans have their body changed surgically in such a radical extent that you do not know whether to be amused or afraid. Joe Rosen who does not seem to have any scruples about it. Personally I think it is a bit weird and I am downright disturbed by the descriptions of the surgery in the article where they talk about stretching torso fat and rejoining rib bones and about how the patient afterwards will have full sensation in their new hanging, boned flaps of flesh. But at the same time though I find myself being partly convinced when I read about how the brain, according to apparently respected Dr. But just because something is scientifically possible and explainable should therefore be acceptable? Rosen appears to think so. And sadly the article is probably right in its comment on that if the technology and the will to experiment exist it is almost impossible for even the most overwhelming ethical qualms to prevent these surgeries from taking place. This excerpt tells about how athletes with a single injection can manipulate with their DNA in favour of their athletic abilities. I already think that it is very wrong for athletes to take steroids and such as they already do, but to mess with your DNA, that it is downright sick and in this context, as the article mentions, also the end of real competition and sportsmanship as we know it, because of the fact that this can not be detected through tests. So these people are not just affecting themselves they are also ruining it for, in this case, other athletes who believe in competition through human capability, in its original sense. Here a young mother talks about the problem of genetic counselling and amniocentesis during a pregnancy. Is it right to make decisions and take actions which affect another life in such a huge way when the human being who is the object of the whole menagerie can not stand up for itself and say no. In that context it would be appropriate to ask the essential question of why people voluntarily want to put their body through such unnatural changes as we have seen in the first articles. Most people who do not know of this problem often come to the conclusion that these people are sick, and should find another way of dealing with their low self-esteem, take a pottery-class or something. But should we not just let these people do with their body what they wish, and if we do not like to look at it or hear about it, we should look the other way and face the fact that just because a few people find this possibility the solution to all their problems does not mean that the whole world will be running around with wings and tails by the end of next week. And you could actually use the same justification in connection with the athletes. If they feel such a huge need to win that they are willing to destroy their own body then let them. Of course it will not be the same to watch the sports any more, but the real reason why people take a step back is the same as with the above mentioned. They are afraid that the tendency will spread. But just because super athletes might choose to tinker with their DNA, it does not mean that our children in the future will have to get DNA injection to be on the local sucker-team. Kort sagt a very superficial world in eternal strife for perfection, where no one is ever satisfied with their looks and real touch is a shameful thing. Now you could imagine that the generations before the people in the story felt that they would be happier if they changed their appearance, but where does it end. When do we stop being natural human and become artificial surgical kiruriske art-pieces. We can see the weirdness of the society in the story now, but then again if you had told people in the 17th century that in the future it would be almost normal to have fat sucked out from under your skin, and having silicone implanted in your breast, etc. I bet they would think that was pretty weird to. Cosmetic Surgery Essays by hwabatte Thank you for reading my cosmetic surgery essay. I hope to receive comments from all of you. Should people be allowed to have cosmetic surgery before the age of 18? With the application of science and technology in medicine, people, especially youngsters, are becoming more aware of cosmetic surgery. According to a recent survey, nearly half of teenagers from 11 to 18 years old said they wanted surgery in pursuit of a "designer" body like their idols and celebrities. However, having cosmetic surgery before turning eighteen is still illegal in most countries. There are pros and cons in doing this. There are two main reasons why youngsters want to go through cosmetic surgery. Firstly, the surgery will theoretically make them more beautiful. Usually, a teen wishes to use the surgery to correct poorly proportioned parts of their body including a mis-shapen nose, protruding ears, overly large breasts, asymmetrical breasts, or severe acne and scarring. After their physical characteristics have been corrected, they should look prettier and more attractive. Secondly, having cosmetic surgery is a way to gain self-esteem. Because their physical problems have been solved, they no longer feel awkward about their appearances. Therefore, they frequently gain more confidence in themselves. For example, Caitlin Clemons, an American teenager, who used to have low self-esteem because of her body, was reported to gain confidence after her breast augmentation surgery. On the other hand, having cosmetic surgery before 18 also has some drawbacks. Firstly, it increases the risk of being affected by side effects from these surgeries. For instance, when going under cosmetic surgery, there is a chance that you could have a reaction against anesthesia used in the operations, which can be deadly. Furthermore, cosmetic surgery is likely to make patients get scars, which cannot be corrected. Secondly, allowing teenagers to go through plastic surgery may make them overestimate physical appearances over inner characteristics. Gradually, they may not treasure their personalities but try as hard as possible to enhance their looks. In conclusion, having cosmetic surgery before turning eighteen has both advantages and disadvantages. It could help you become more beautiful, but at the same time, make you become a surgery disaster, if the surgery does not succeed. As a teenager, trying to enhance our body is necessary, but we should also try to improve our personality.

No matter what combatants against discrimination say, appearances that match the existing beauty standards remain one of the crucial characteristics of a modern individual. People who are discontent with their appearances have different ways of improving the way they look, such as makeup, clothes, or being in harmony with themselves. However, there is a more radical alternative, which is effective in terms of changing the way a person looks like, but is highly debated and should be abstained from in the majority of cases: The foremost reason for not getting plastic surgery is that this procedure can become highly addictive Huffington Post. The best examples of this are women like Cindy Jackson who got 55 plastic surgeries, which is a world record , or Jocelyn Wildenstein, who is rumored to have spent about 4 million dollars on plastic surgeries. Janice Dickinson, Michael Jackson, Courtney Love, and other famous personalities who had undergone plastic surgeries can also be good examples of why this kind of surgery should be abstained from. See your grade before Free Expert Help Plastic surgery does not solve the main problem of the person who decides to undergo it, which is being discontent with his or her appearance. Such a person should rather focus on solving his or her inner problems, and should pay more attention to what is going on within themselves rather than on the surface of their bodies MindBodyGreen. In the case of an aging person, it might be the fear of death or the feeling that they do not have a youthful appearance anymore that causes them to change their appearance. If a person is obese, they should consider changing their diet and lifestyle rather than doing a liposuction. Anyways, visiting a psychologist or a psychotherapist could be more useful and satisfying than having your face redesigned. It is important to remember that plastic surgery is something that remains with you forever dbreath. You cannot return to your natural look if you feel discontent with the surgery. You will have to do another surgery to look similar to your original self, or try to improve on your previous plastic surgery. Moreover, if you try to keep up with fashion trends, you will lose the race, because trends change, and your appearance remains. What is natural is almost always better than the artificial, and deep inside you will know that the way you used to look before the surgery was better. However, it is necessary to distinguish between cosmetic and reconstructive surgery. Plastic surgery in its cosmetic aspect should be abstained from. You cannot undo plastic surgery, so once you undergo it, you will have to live with it forever. Be yourself, and see the beauty you hold naturally.

Chapter 7 : Plastic Surgery Essays: Examples, Topics, Titles, & Outlines

Plastic surgery is becoming a widespread pandemic in the United States. More and more people everyday are electing to take this surgery which, for many people, is an unnecessary change to their body.

The system comprises of three components: Articulating surgical instruments capable of cutting, dissecting, suturing are mounted on the robotic arms which are introduced into the body through cannulas. Unlike in conventional surgery, the doctor does not touch these surgical instruments directly. Sitting at the control console a few feet from the operating table, the surgeon looks into a viewfinder to examine the 3-D images being sent by the camera inside the patient. The images show the surgical site and the two or three surgical instruments mounted on the tips of the surgical rods. Advantages of Robotic Surgery: Major advantages of robotic surgery are precision, miniaturization, smaller incisions, decreased blood loss, articulation beyond normal manipulation, high definition, 3-D images, less fatigue of surgeons during long surgeries. Saving of manpower and benefits of robotic tele surgery on the front lines of combat zones to the patients too, robotic surgery offers certain benefits such as reduced pain and trauma, less blood loss, less postoperative pain, less risk of infection, shorter hospital stay, faster recovery and less scarring. Robotic surgery is being done in India also. However, because of the prohibitive cost, it is limited only to some select centers by surgeons trained at centers abroad. Requirement of informed consent of the patient not just for the surgical procedure but for performance of the procedure by the robotic surgeon. Adequate training of not just the surgeon but also the rest of the team in robotic surgery. Need to assess the competence of human surgeons for robotic surgery before allowing them to perform robotic surgery. If the surgeon is at a different geographical location, the latency can be hazardous. Potential contraindications to robotic surgery such as history of a bleeding disorder, prior surgery in the target area which may leave internal scar tissue, obesity, pregnancy and significant heart or lung problems must be ruled out to prevent any operative hazards. Ethical guidelines will have to be put in place to regulate the robotic surgery and protect the interests of the patients who may be exploited for commercial reasons. There should be a program of planned preventive maintenance of equipment to ensure high quality flawless performance. Being high precision equipment, periodic recalibration by the supplier would be of utmost importance. Robotic surgery is the most modern modality in the field of surgery. Highly advanced as it is, the facilities and knowhow are available only at a few limited places in India. The high cost of robotic surgery and the issues discussed above are important practical considerations. Unless performed at highly specialized centers and for ultra delicate procedures outside the competence of human surgeons, surgery by robots may not inspire much confidence among the patients as of now.

Chapter 8 : Free Essays on Plastic Surgery

With the right direction you can easily complete a plastic surgery essay. Finding the right subject matter is a good place to begin, plastic surgery has a variety of different topics to choose from. Some examples are: risks of cosmetic surgery, teen plastic surgery, overview of plastic surgery, etc.

Plastic surgery is a field of medical science associated with correcting the form and function of a body part. Many deformities and functional deficiencies can be partially or completely eliminated with the help of this science. Reconstruction and cosmetic are two aspects of plastic surgery. Although a surgery may be carried out for both reconstructive and cosmetic purposes, there are some surgeries that are intended to purely heal and reconstruct the functional aspect. Others may focus on aesthetic aspect but the base of a cosmetic surgery lies in reconstructive approach. When a tumor inside the brain has to be operated for reconstruction, it is a reconstructive plastic surgery. Cosmetic procedures are usually done to improve self-confidence and enhance apparent beauty. The normal body structures like nose, cheeks, chin etc. Candidates who opt for cosmetic surgery must carry a positive outlook and a realistic attitude to see desired changes in self-image. Its purpose should solely be a higher self-esteem and it should never be sought as a way to impress anyone or change yourself as others expect you to look like. Treatment of burns, microsurgery and hand surgery are some other types of plastic surgery. Sushruta is known to be the father of Surgery and is known to make contributions to the field of surgical operations in 6th century B. It is believed that the reconstructive surgical procedures were in place by B. Walter Yeo is the first person known to have got benefit from plastic surgery in Even the ancient Romans are known to have carried out plastic surgery to reconstruct body parts like ears. It was only after anesthesia like techniques were devised that plastic surgery became a painless process. Gradually sterile techniques were introduced to reduce chances of infection. Antibiotics like penicillin and sulfonamide made these elective surgeries even more effective. Skin grafting is the most common technique used in plastic surgery. The source of this skin tissue may be the donor or the recipient. Functional deficits resulting from burns, injuries from a traumatic incident, fracture of facial bones, cancers or tumors, developmental complications etc. Thus hand surgery, repair of scars, breast reduction plasty, breast reconstruction after a mastectomy, creating an outer ear missing congenitally, etc. Cleft Lip and Palate Surgery, craniofacial surgery in children and adults, reconstructing benign lesions of skin, head and neck through surgical and laser treatment are others in the category. Cosmetic surgery is another procedure which is done to improve physical appearance and reduce signs of aging in a person. Botox and injectable fillers used on face, eyelid surgery for cosmetic and functional purposes, cosmetic ear surgery, facelift surgery, liposuction, lifting and shaping procedures of the body and cosmetic breast surgery are some types of commonly done cosmetic surgical procedures.
