Did you know fairy gardens first debuted in the US in ? Soon thereafter, the New York Times featured these miniature creations in an article and the rest, as they say, is history. Fairy gardens are often planted in containers. Planting a Fairy Garden is a wonderful activity to do with a child or grandchild. It brings out the imagination and creativity in everyone. Some enthusiasts create fairy gardens to enliven indoor spaces and patios. Larger fairy gardens can be built into natural landscapes like trees. They can be added to pre-existing flower beds, altars, or rock gardens. I have gathered together an assortment of furniture and accent pieces to be used to decorate and enhance any container fairy garden. The pieces are all painted metal and with care, will last years. Made of metal and coated with black paint. Available in black only. Available in cream or green. A perfect structure to cover a patio for your fairies to visit under. Plant a little vine to climb up it or string some twinkle lights on this to provide a magical setting. Available in Cream or Green. Fairies can get in the swing of things with this dainty swing set. Made of metal, the base is coated with green paint and the leaf-shaped seat is silver. Available in Green Only. A quaint bench that your fairies will enjoy sitting on in the garden while telling wild stories. A stylish wheelbarrow for fairies to transport pebbles and flowers. The wire fence mimics wrought iron and is a fantastic addition to the inside of your Fairy Garden. Make a wish whenever you sprinkle this on your plants. Sold in a set of five different colors. This fairy carpet provides the same benefits of mulching, it will help with moisture retention for your plants and add a finished touch to your garden. Ships in a plastic container. Colorful boulders to place around Fairy Flower beds and build retaining walls with.
