Famous Chefs (And Other Characters) Cook with Beer by W. Scott Griffiths, Christopher Finch Chefs from America's top restaurants and brewpubs provide a collection of modern, mouthwatering recipes, all using beer as a principal ingredient.

You make him wasabi chili. Naturally I took all the credit, but time to give the credit where it is due. I make sure to use a different dark beer each time I make it for a different angle. I like using a chocolate stout, which adds a rich and smooth consistency. Kudos to the creator. I stick to the recipe mostly, but I do usually omit the habaneros and sometimes substitute a can or two of great northern white beans for the kidney beans just because I find them more tender. I used a smoked porter for the beer the first time but lately have just been using a standard red ale with a drop of liquid smoke mixed in. I find the flavor to be almost identical. I have yet to meet anyone who does not love this chili. I did add a teaspoon of cocoa powder per 8 servings. Even beating her boss whose been the reigning chili champ. This recipe is awesome!! The Starbucks Verona and the Guinness worked well together. It was the only crock pot that was sitting empty. We are making another batch today. We used it for a chili cook off and won 1st place. This is the perfect chili. Everyone wants the recipe. Other than that everything was exactly the same. And yes, it is better the next day. This can also be made with ground turkey, and it tastes even better the next day! The only modification he made was to add a little pasta a few hours before the chili finished cooking. And speaking of beans, these heirloom beans will take your award-winning chili to the next level. Carl will eat that. Share with him CarlNo9 on Twitter.
