When you examine old test papers, the same topics come up regularly. The knowledge base never changes. The questions are just from different angles. Analyse the subject curriculum, and divide it into a series of topics Write these down on a piece of paper. Now you are ready to score them If a teacher used one as the basis of an assignment, award one point. Even primary school children are struggling to come to terms with the competitive culture their educators force on them. The result is inevitable. They should all pass if teachers did their job right. Tragically, many fail, although they ought not to. Researchers believe the main reason is a lack of preparation. You Cannot Afford to Let This Happen to Your Child Our teachers are overworked and under pressure to perform They have no extra time to make sure that every child tests well Children who do not have that natural skill are disadvantaged They fail their secondary school exam papers although they try hard Many children have an unfair start in life and they never catch up Watch Out for These Critical Early Warning Signs Tests can be nerve-racking for children, especially when they are in adolescence and facing so many different challenges. If your child comes back from their Secondary 1 or Secondary 2 exam in an agitated state and tells you that they failed, then the chances are that the teacher had no time for previous test papers, which could have made the difference. Think about this carefully. This is not rocket science. Politicians rehearse their speeches, soccer players dribble balls for hours, actors prepare carefully for every performance. They must practice first on old school exam papers. Those who prepared smartly did better. That is because their parents let them rehearse on past year test papers. The earlier ones are free. Give your kid the break in life they deserve.
