Oct 9, at 2: He has been criticized for a remark he made on Facebook about the confirmation of Brett Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court. He wrote the remark in a private group, but deleted it it prompted backlash. Critics jumped on the fact that coat hangers are often referenced in connection to dangerous back-alley abortions. One of the chief concerns of Kavanaugh opponents is that he could potentially overturn abortion rights. Barber stated that he did not mean the comment the way in it was perceived. In July, he was in Washington, D. Outside the Supreme Court building, protesters on both sides of the abortion debate were demonstrating. Barber said one of the women threw a coat hanger at him. He stressed that he had not meant to reference unsafe abortion practices. The newspaper also reported that Barber has received death threats and a lot of angry mail since making the coat hanger comment. Two of the people that have criticized Barber for his post include the mayor of Parkersburg and fellow city council member Sharon Kuhl. The majority of the comments were critical of Barber. The state government is asking voters to decide whether the following language should be added to the Constitution: Opponents have said the change would most directly impact poorer families in the state. The American Civil Liberties Union has called the proposed amendment an attack on reproductive rights. The coalition against the amendment includes the following language: It has attracted additional signatures in the wake of his coat hanger comment on Facebook. The behavior referenced on the petition was an arrest in July of Eric Barber was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct and obstruction. WOVA-Fox in Parkersburg reported that Barber had tried to take a photo of someone with a medical emergency and was allegedly yelling curse words at the person. He was also accused of ignoring police commands. The obstruction charge was dismissed. The Parkersburg News and Sentinel reports that Barber has a long list of former legal troubles. In , he pleaded guilty to breaking and entering. He was sentenced to years behind bars but it was not clear when he was released. In , he was arrested again and pleaded guilty to DUI, possession of a controlled substance and trying to escape from police. T Barber was arrested for driving under the influence in and pleaded guilty. That same year, he was charged with marijuana possession. In , a warrant was issued for his arrest for failing to appear in court in connection to the marijuana charge. He was elected to the Parkersburg City Council as a Democrat in The ordinance in question would have made it illegal to discriminate on the basis of gender identity, sexual orientation, genetic information and veteran status. The proposal was rejected by the city council. Cobranchi said the three members who voted against the ordinance did so for religious reasons. Barber also disagreed with a decision that the City Council stop praying before meetings, after the Freedom from Religion Foundation argued it was inappropriate.

This report provides baseline early literacy programming data from these 13 library jurisdictions. The data was collected by CSL from February through May of from people who provide early literacy services on behalf of these libraries. The data itself is divided into two different tables based on programming location—“in-house or off-premises outreach. Baseline Findings ECCR-based literacy-enhanced programming is offered in communities of varying sizes around the state. For 11 of these 13 library jurisdictions, in-house literacy-enhanced storytimes are the most prevalent of these types of programs. In-House Programming Table 1 looks at the numbers of programs and attendance figures per year for activities held on the library premises. It should be noted that some libraries host programs for community partners such as child-care groups or clients of social service agencies inside their libraries as well as off-premises. For this report, literacy-enhanced storytimes are defined as having these 5 components: Literacy theme for the storytime, using at least 1 of the 6 pre-reading skills. Storytime leader models and communicates about early literacy skills. Sharing of skill-oriented information by leader either verbally or with handout material. Nearly all of the libraries, 12 of the 13 jurisdictions, offer this type of programming. Child visits range from Basalt to 73, Douglas per year. Adult visits per year range from Basalt to 44, Douglas. Estimated adult visits per year range from 40 Arapahoe to Mesa. Mesa provides their 14 workshops as part of a community partnership that serves teen moms. While such programs serve to benefit children and adults in these communities, statistics for these specialized-audience in-house adult ECCR workshops are not covered here. Off-Premises Programming Table 2 looks at programs and attendance figures per year for activities provided by libraries at off-site venues outreach. In some cases, these numbers represent outreach programming led by closely supervised library-trained volunteers. Off-premises programs frequently reach adults and children who might not otherwise avail themselves of public library services. Often, these are geared toward specific groups at specific locales such as a prison or a child-care facility. Nine of the 13 jurisdictions offer this programming. Child visits range from Arapahoe to 57, Denver per year. Adult visits per year range from 48 Arapahoe to 6, Denver. Frequently, off-premises storytime programs are held in child-care environments where the ratio of children to adults tends to be higher than comparable statistics for in-house programming. Where available, the frequency of program offerings ranges from 1 Douglas County Libraries to 22 Jefferson County Public Library per year. The data from these 13 library jurisdictions who have staff members serving on the CLEL Steering Committee provides us with a useful overview for understanding several common types of early literacy programming currently underway—as well as the frequency of and attendance at those activities. In Colorado, such early literacy program offerings are not limited to these 13 libraries; other public libraries around the state enthusiastically provide these kinds of programs, too. Future collection of statistics will enable CSL and CLEL to better understand the availability and impact of early literacy activities.
