Violence and jealousy According to an article posted by the RollingStone magazine, Lee's diary contained signs and evidence of "intimate partner violence", ultimately demonstrating that Adnan was very possessive and abusive in their relationship (McDonell-Parry).

Federal agents accused Martha Buendia-Chavarria a Mexican national and resident of Marion, Ohio of manufacturing false identity documents and passing them to illegal immigrants seeking employment in northwest Ohio, according to a criminal complaint filed in federal court in October. On Friday in U. District Court in Toledo, Buendia-Chavarria pleaded guilty to all charges laid out in an indictment filed against her in December. Handcuffed with a metal chain around her waist, Buendia-Chavarria, 44, wore a sweatshirt that bore the initials of the Corrections Center of Northwest Ohio, located near Stryker, where she has been held since June 8. Buendia-Chavarria through a translator said she came to the U. She spent all her time serving her husband and driving him to Columbus, where he conducted secret business, she said. At one point, he left the United States for Mexico, telling her that she would starve without him. Not expecting him to return, she began a relationship with another man, a close friend who later died. But six months later, her husband came back. To earn extra income, she, her husband, and several others started a counterfeit document manufacturing and distribution business. In her home, she helped manufacture fake identities, which she would pass to a vendor to sell. Buendia-Chavarria described the decision to participate as an act of submission to her husband. He was always an aggressive person. Before then, the defense and prosecution will each submit reports to the judge with recommendations for her sentence. She has two children in the U. District Court Judge Jack Zouhary said during the hearing that she would likely be deported. Defense attorney Jeffrey B. Lazarus told The Blade he expects to recommend two years in prison for his client, the minimum period possible, in his presentence report. But Buendia-Chavarria could face more than a decade of prison time, hundreds of thousands of dollars in fines, and several years of supervised release. However, after having reached the final minutes of the podcast and having listened to all the arguments that Sarah Koenig had to say, I was ultimately able to shape my final decision of declaring Adnan guilty of the murder of Hae Min Lee for the five following reasons. Hae Min Lee 1. When Sarah Koenig, the narrator of the podcast, interviewed Don, he explained that as soon as he realized he would be a suspect in the case, which was very likely considering he was dating the victim, he immediately began to retrace everything he did the day of the murder “he made sure he knew where he was, who he talked to, who he texted” to ensure that he had his story straight and that there would be no doubt of his innocence. Adnan, much like Don, was very close to Hae and it was clear that he would be a potential suspect for the murder. Additionally, he, being the typical high-school boy that he is, had developed a strong feeling of jealousy when he realized that his ex-girlfriend was in love with another man. Since Hae was killed by manual strangulation, the killer must have had some sort of personal hatred towards her and I believe that Adnan fits this description perfectly. It is very possible that he was heart-broken after his breakup with her, let his emotions loose and as a way to get revenge, decided to kill her. I believe that Adnan had his mind full of thoughts and needed to find a way to express his anger and what better way is there of doing this than instinctively writing out a hateful message at the top of a break-up letter from his ex-girlfriend? The unlikeliness of a butt dial Another reason as to why I believe Adnan Syed should be deemed guilty of this murder is because of a call made from his phone to a woman named Nisha, during a time at which he claims to have been at school without it. Since there was no answering machine on that line and the call had been registered to his cell phone bill, the call must have been answered. Adnan argues that this call could have been made by Jay himself. However, there is no reason for Jay to have been the one making this call since he and Nisha did not know each other very well. Therefore, the call must have come from Adnan. Adnan then claims that it could have been a butt dial, since her number was programmed into his phone. I believe that this is simply too convenient and of an excuse to say. I do not believe that someone would go 2 minutes and 22 seconds listening to their phone ring without picking it up. Adnan and Jay were close friends; they drove all over town together, attended the same high-school and regularly hung out with each other. When Jay told his side of the story, ultimately throwing Adnan under the bus, he provided a burial location, the clothing that Hae was wearing and where her car was left. These are very convincing facts which seem to be too specific to have been made up. Especially because Adnan, on the other hand, was conveniently unable to recall any events at all and thus provide a significant alibi. He admitted that he had helped Adnan bury the body. He says Adnan began to openly admit that he was going to kill Hae and that he had a deep hatred towards her. This is yet another motive for Adnan to kill Hae. There is clearly somebody, if not more than only one person, lying about their story and so speculation about what happened to Hae seems to be the only thing that is left to do. It is hard to tell which scenario is better than the other and which one was most likely to occur. However, one thing remains for sure. If Adnan truly were innocent, he would have to have extremely horrible luck. It would mean that the exact day he loaned his car to his friend, he ends up being pointing the finger and blamed for the murder. Then, his phone accidentally butt dials a girl that only he would know and call at the exact day that his ex-girlfriend dies. Therefore, because of the lack of evidence present to prove his innocence and the mere unlikeliness that all these events happened because of sheer bad luck, I believe that Adnan Syed is guilty for the murder of Hae Min Lee. Ayakanno Marithamuthu, a caretaker at the Public Utilities Board holiday chalets in Changi, was allegedly bludgeoned to death in the Orchard Road Presbyterian Church. His body was dismembered, cooked in curry, packed in plastic bags and disposed in rubbish bins along the roads. However, his remains and evidence of the murder were never found. His wife and her three brothers were charged in court in but released in the same year due to lack of evidence. The brothers were arrested again and released in June after spending four years in prison. On 22 May, she left her house for a jog, but never returned home. Her mother made a police report. She suffered multiple stab wounds on her neck. Her body showed signs of a fierce but futile protest, probably made when she was trying to fight off her killer s. An autopsy showed that she had been sexually assaulted, and died of massive bleeding from the stab wounds. The murderer s were never discovered. They managed to make their way to a nearby restaurant for help. Soh, who was stabbed in the back, survived the ordeal. Tan died before the police arrived. She was stabbed in the neck, just below the ear. The murderers were never found and the case remains unsolved. She was sentenced to death in January and hanged on 17 March. The incident caused diplomatic relations between Singapore and the Philippines to be strained for some years. Dutchman Johannes van Damme was arrested at Changi Airport after the police found 9. He was found guilty of drug trafficking, sentenced to death, and hanged on 23 September. Chong was eventually sentenced to life imprisonment. He was found guilty of murder and hanged on 19 April. He was hanged on 8 Dec after a day trial. A year-old whom Ler had known for five years accepted the offer. Ler manipulated the youth to carry out the deed, and the youth fatally stabbed Leong with a knife given to him by Ler. Ler was found guilty of conspiring and abetting the murder of Leong and was hanged in December. The youth was spared the death sentence because he was underage and placed under indefinite detention. McCrea and Ong fled from Singapore on 5 January and were arrested in Melbourne in June after being on the run for about six months. Ong was deported to Singapore and sentenced in February to 12 years imprisonment, while McCrea was extradited to Singapore in and sentenced to 24 years imprisonment in June Australian Van Tuong Nguyen was convicted of carrying about grams of heroin at Changi Airport while travelling from Cambodia to Australia and sentenced to death in March by the High Court. After a failed appeal to the Court of Appeal and despite pleas for clemency from the Australian government, Nguyen was hanged on 2 December Took was hanged on 3 November after failing to overturn his conviction at the Court of Appeal and after President S. Nathan rejected his plea for clemency. See Murder of Huang Na for more information. Nigerian Iwuchukwu Amara Tochi was arrested at Changi Airport for carrying capsules containing heroin. The Daily Herald reported that year-old Morgan Henderson of Mammoth will serve three years in jail or until authorities resolve the pending murder case against year-old Jerrod Baum.

In , the Salem Witch trials were run by five judges, a chief justice, and ministers without legal training. The judges allowed touching tests and examinations of the bodies for witches marks. The evidence provided in would include stories, gossip, and unsupported details. The only way the accused could defend themselves were to produce evidence and speak for themselves. As a 21st century citizen, I have the right to an attorney, I cannot be persecuted without evidence, and I will have a case of justice. These options allow me to go against the accusers and not be persecuted without evidence. I can have people testify on my behalf to claim that I am not a witch. When the Salem Witch Trials were held the people accused did not have good reasons to be put in prison. The officials that were arresting people just looked for any abnormal behavior that took place and assumed they were a witch. If I were to be put on trial for being a witch the main difference would be that I would have fair representation. Whatever I say the court has to accept it and move on. This chain kept leading to more and more people getting tried as witches. One way was to look all over someones body to look for the mark of a witch. Wich i think is still not accurate because that person may just have a weird birthmark or something. Now a days eveyone has aot of rights. We have the right to an attorney and can only be arrested with due cause. I can also have witnesses testify with me. There has been a lot of changes to the justice system since the salem witch trials. People who were charged with during the hysteria of were denied all rights to legal counsel, to appeal, and to have witnesses testify on their behalf. In modern times we would have all of those rights plus one that most accused witches were denied; innocent until proven guilty. Also evidence in modern court would have to be verified while evidence in the witch trials varied from gossip to unsupported stories. The only rights that the accused in Salem were granted, that were remotely similar to the ones we have now, is the rights to produce evidence, speak for themselves, and cross examine their accusers. In , my options would have been few. I could speak for myself and claim i was not a witch. I could bring or provide evidence that i am not guilty of witchcraft or wizardry. These were my main options, neither of which were very helpful and my opinion would probably be ignored. Today, however, i could hire an attorney and i could have witnesses. They would not be able to convict me of anything without accurate evidence and secure witnesses. I would bring to court my evidence against their accusations along with any witnesses that would testify for me. During the period of Witch Trails, many people were accused of crimes that they did not do. Young girls accused older woman or men that they had performed witchcraft on them. The accused had no real evidence that they were witches. Young girls had no real reason to accuse these people for witchcraft. However, some reasons these girl might have done so are, attention, or because they were threatened too. In todays society people would have no problem proving what they believed or what was true. An attorney would find enough evidence to free you of charge. The accused would have a fair trial. The accused in had little or no rights because there still was not a decent court system. They were also already convinced that the accused were witches. The town of Salem was a very small town when these trails occurred, and therefore everyone knew each other and was caught up in the gossip. So the opinions of these courts were probably already known throughout the town. Today we would have judges and juries that were not involved in what the town thought about these people. We also would have a lawyer to defend us, and I am certain they would be able to dig up some sort of evidence for me. The court today would have been very fair and ample evidence would have to be present to convict me of such crime. During the time of the Salem Witch trials in , people were accused and thrown in prison or executed without proper evidence. They were wrongfully being charged as witches or for performing witchcraft. The courts were full of people asking the victims loaded questions. Today, people have layers and have to have strong evidence against them to be able to press charges. If I were called a witch today, with all the evidence that would be present contradicting the accusation, I would probably not be in any trouble. During the Salem Witch trials, innocent people were on trial for being a witch. There was no proof or evidence that said that they were a witch. If I was on trial for being a witch today, I would have a lawyer who would help my case and there would be no evidence to show that I was a witch. Today if i was accused of wizardry i couldnt be charged unless hard evidence was presented. In i would have been charged based on the accounts of witnesses bearing no proof. The only belief that i was a wizard would have been by the testimony of what some other guy noticed that looked abnormal to him. Today they would need alot more than just one eyewitness to something abnormal. There are many different paths of action that you could take. You could flee the city, but locating somebody is much easier nowadays. You could accuse somebody else and try to get yourself off of the hook. You could show up for court and plead innocent and fight the charges. You could admit your guilt even if you are innocent. The worst option would be to refuse the trial and just face the consequences. The accused were usually women of higher standard, the reson why the accusers, who were younger people, was probably jealousy of the money they had or the land and social status. As a 21st century student I would have the right to an attorney, they would not be able to accuse me without evidence. People who were the accused had no right to a person who could deffend them. It was their job to deffend themself regardless if they were telling the truth or not. The Salem Witch Trials were run very differently than how a normal court session is run today. First of all, people would receive letters saying they were under arrest when the officials had no real evidence of witchcraft at all. People were basing there judgement on spectral evidence rather than real proof that the person getting accused was actually using witchcraft. Also, during the witch trials, the judge would automatically assume that the accused person was guilty which resulted in a very bias and unfair trial. Today in court you have a jury rather than just a judge to determine if you are guilty or not. You also have to be proven guilty with actual evidence before being declared guilty. Court in the 21st century is definitely fair and more accurate than it was in During the Salem witch trials in , the accused witches were considered guilty until they proved their innocence. Also the types of evidence back then would not be permitted now. They would search a witches body for abnormal signs which they do not do now. Also they would ask loaded questions. These were questions asuming that the defendants were guilty. Most of the time the evidence was that a person thought someone was a witch without any good evidence. If this happened in the 21st century, the defendants would be innocent until proven guilty and also have an attorney working for them. The court would not be able to prove a witch guilty unless they had actual evidence, not just opinions. In the Salem witch trials the people that were being persecuted had just been thought to have strange or inappropriate behavior, therefore they were assumed of performing witchcraft. In the questionings by the judges it was more accusations. They pretty much had to defend themselves. The questions asked of them were questions leading them to say that they are a witch or to confess. The proof against the ascussed were peoples testimonys which were false most of the time. If found guilty they would be hanged. Today however we run a very fine court system. You are not guilty until proven guilty. Attorneys and testimonys are allowed to you. Also if it is a serious case the police get involved and help solve the case. Which means the case will be solved correctly. The time of the Samlem Witch Trials and present day time are very different. How people would be treated and how their cases would be treated are completly different. In people accused or wizardry or witch craft did not have a very fair trial. They were put on trial and they had no real evidence of the truth, evidences were composed of towns people making up stories and spreading rumors. Any one in that day could be accused of being a wich for any kind of odd behavior. If i were to be put on trial now it would be much different. I would first have to have a legit reason why i was put on trial.

That was the only thing these men of envy and jealousy could charge against him. Daniel was guilty as charged. Unfortunately, I don't know that we would be found guilty.

Bergoglio et al Case Docket No. Their guilt has been ably presented and proven beyond any reasonable doubt by the Prosecution. The refusal of the Defendants to respond to a lawful Summons, to deny or refute the charges against them, or to present a counter case in their own defense, compelled the Court to consider their silence as a de facto pro confesso plea in which their guilt was established by their refusal to enter a plea. Precedent has established that pro confesso " which is the refusal of a defendant to plea in a case of profound importance " provides the basis for the lawful conviction and deposing of rulers and responsible heads of church and state. The People in Parliament v. Charles Stuart, January 3, In this precedent, the High Court established by the Parliament of England ruled that the silence of heads of church and state when accused of crimes against their own people amounts to a confession by the accused of all of the charges made against them January 22, One of our colleagues offers a dissenting opinion. While concurring with the judgement that all three Defendants are guilty as charged, the dissenting Magistrate argues that pro confesso applies only when no other means exist to prevent such rulers from perpetrating tyranny and wars of aggression on their own people and their liberties, as was so in the historical case cited. The dissenting colleague argues that by convicting the Defendants primarily under a pro confesso precedent, their actual guilt for the crimes cited can be construed to have been established according to a legal technicality. Accordingly, it is the unanimous judgement of the Court that: The Defendants are sentenced to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole or pardon, and to the forfeiture of their assets, property and authority. The sworn Sheriffs of the Court and their affiliated Direct Action Units, established by the Court on June 1, , are ordered to immediately arrest and imprison the Defendants at facilities provided by the Court, and to seize their property and assets. The public is asked to assist the Sheriffs in this task. The Court will produce a full public statement making it clear that the basis for its conviction of the Defendants lay entirely in the hard evidence of their guilt, and that their refusal to plea, and hence the pro confesso judgement, was a contributing factor but not the basis of the guilty sentence. In addition, to emphasize that this conviction is not a limited one aimed only at the top figureheads of murderous regimes, as of September 1, , the Court will establish an ongoing Permanent Inquiry to investigate and prosecute others involved in the crimes proven in this case and contained in the permanent Court record. This Inquiry shall be entitled The Permanent Commission into Child Trafficking and Ritual Sacrifice and will have the power to subpoena and arrest, and adjudicate cases before the Court. The Commission will be international in scope, have no time restriction, and will seek cooperation from governments, international agencies and police forces with the aim of prosecuting and stopping forever the trafficking, ritual torture and murder of children. To protect this Commission, its witnesses, officers and evidence, the Court record from the case of The People v. Bergoglio et al will remain sealed for now, along with the identity of the witnesses and Court officers, with the exception of that permitted by the special and unanimous authorization of the Court. The Jury members who were involved in proceedings thus far are relieved of their duties and thanked for their efforts. This concludes the case of The People v.

Chapter 6 : Account Suspended

A jury on Thursday found former Los Angeles Police Det. Stephanie Lazarus guilty of murdering the wife of a man she loved, bringing an end to a remarkable case in which a new generation of the LAPD redeemed the failures of a past one.

Now, with his fate in the balance, the verdict is in. It was spur of the moment. He was something I could open up to. She had broken up with bravo after he graduated high school. But Erica wanted to tell Pedro the truth, that she had feelings for his close friend. I liked him because he was a very sensitive point in his life, I suppose. But when Pedro found out, prosecutors say, he hatched a plan. The trail of evidence started on the internet with searches, said miss, of alibis. And fatal doses of sleeping pills. A shovel, to dig a grey. Duct tape to bind him. Gatorade to mix with sleeping kills. He called Christian, saying he was suicide and needed help. And in court, the love-struck bravo, telling the jury, the only person he intended to kill that night was himself. I was too nervous to do anything with knives. Police and prosecutors never bought that story. And say this feels like it was all about revenge. The case they laid out to the jury begins with two friends meeting for lunch. Christian Aguilar buying a Kanye west cd with cash. Police say he bound Aguilar using duct tape. And then, he strangled him with his belt. Then, put his phone on airplane mode. But his phone helped police put the pieces together. What did he turn out in the woods of a private hunt club? Bravo admitting he his phone was on airplane mode. What was he doing? Why that use of the flashlight? But in court, bravo says he never intended to kill him. You intend for him to go on the ground, right? I intended for him to lose his balance. You intend for him to lose his balance. You intend for him to be on the ground. I never said that. His alibi was that the whole time he did not intend to kill Aguilar but himself. Even writing this suicide note that night. Police say it was after the murder. In court, his demeanor, conversational and combative. Dancing around every word. He said he was going out with Erica. I interpreted he was going as a friend. In the car, he told you they were having sex, right? Pedro bravo on the stand, he was defensive, swirly. Had a nervous laugh. These are the kind of things, to me, make a jury doubt his credibility. Cagey in court, but in lockup, not so cagey. Allegedly spilling the beans to his cell mate, named michelangelo. I think he said he was going to poison him with a mixture of sleeping pills and pesticide. And mixed with soda or something. His backup plan was to have a knife, you know, to cut his throat. They found him, bones and all. And the only cause of death was strangulation. A new courtroom twist, saying his cell mate strong armed him and dictated every word. I think I said I wrote this letter, dictated by Michael Angelo. The jury believed none of it. Guilty of first-degree murder. Four hours after getting the case, it officially closed it. Count three, guilty, as charged in count three of the indictment. And on and on it went. Guilty of all seven counts against him. For the aguilar, no jubilation. Only those stoic stares, turning to tears. Justice and sentencing came swiftly. This is your day of reckoning. The day you answer for your choices. For Pedro bravo, murder was the easy part. Getting away with it, much more difficult. Before "Hunger Games" and "Divergent," actor tried for 18 years to bring the edgy novel to the big screen. By FoodTrients Guilty as Charged: A Case Against Sugar In recent years, we have learned that warnings about some dietary fats like butter and coconut oil were misinformed, while the dangers of sugar were underplayed. Among the leading advocates for this reappraisal is Gary Taubes, an investigative journalist who has been reporting on nutrition since the late s. Signs of the syndrome include obesity, high blood pressure and, more than anything, insulin resistanceâ€”which puts a particularly heavy strain on the body. And what causes insulin resistance and metabolic syndrome? The trouble is, this type of research takes years and years to fully be tested. To firmly hammer the last nail in the sugar coffin, he sets out to expose the lie on which it is predicated: This contention currently forms the bedrock of official nutrition advice worldwide. Taubes book offers life-saving advice about the health dangers of sugar. In making the case against sugar, Gary Taubes details the often insidious efforts by the sugar industry to hide how harmful it is, just as the tobacco companies once did with cigarettes.
