Problems Are Like Knives! We Stumble Only Over Molehills! How To Influence Multitudes: SUCCESS is as specific, separate and distinct a study-subject as is mathematics, physics, spelling, physiology, chemistry, or any study-subject taught in our schools and universities. The study of SUCCESS as a separate subject deals with as many different and identifiable factors as almost any other subject and more than most. There are few other subjects which are composed of that many different laws, principles, rules and identifiable factors. Surely, that fact alone and there are many other reasons justifies the classification and study of SUCCESS, itself, as a separate, specific and distinct subject. The reason people succeed slowly in their professions or occupations is that they concentrate on improving their job-skills. Certainly, it is necessary and important that you become more knowledgeable and skillful in your work -but that still is only ONE proven success method. Since there are more than a thousand proven success methods, you can easily realize that you are handicapping yourself by concentrating on only ONE proven success method job-skill out of a thousand additional success methods. That is why it is necessary to obtain and constantly use as many proven success methods as possible in addition to improving your job-skill. That is the only way you can get richer. You may succeed-slowly and with great difficulty-by becoming more knowledgeable and skillful in performing your work. But you cannot get richer quicker that way! There are more than a thousand proven success methods. I know-because I personally have them in my private libraries and personal files. They can be used-in addition to job-skill-in ALL occupations Well, it is elemental. It is fundamental to succeeding at anything. How many people do you know who devote even an hour every night to seriously studying how to be more successful in doing what they will do the next day There is an old proverb: You, as just one individual, have no control over high prices. Your only solution is to get richer quicker so that you easily can afford to pay for whatever you want in life-whatever the price. You have to learn and then do what is required to "make your own loaf larger". It is a lot easier to get rich than to remain poor. People who are poor find everything difficult. And, for the poor, everything will continue to be difficult-as long as they will not learn and use the simple, easy, sure methods of succeeding-getting richer quicker. So, we come back to our first basic requirement for success: You have to learn how. To the uninformed a molehill is a mountain! But to the person who knows how, success is easy. Pasteur discovered vaccination more by accident than by the scientific research for which he trained himself. Yet, when his critics chided him, saying that he stumbled on vaccination by mere chance, Pasteur replied, "True, but chance favors the trained mind. Andrew Carnegie, the great steel tycoon who was the richest man in his time and who gave his millions to help others, used to say, "There is no use whatever in trying to help people who do not help themselves. But you, yourself, must climb those steps! I have provided the ladder. But I cannot make you climb it. And nobody can climb it for you. You must climb the ladder of success, yourself. You can start a project by studying it-but you cannot complete it that way. It has been said that "knowledge is power". That simply is not so! Knowledge is not power. Knowledge is only potential power. It is your use of knowledge which gives you power. Do not wait until you have read the entire book. Climb your success ladder one step at a time. Do not wait and then try to reach the top in one big leap. And your first step is in the next chapter The bigger their successes, the more dependable are their success methods. Which brings us to General Motors. General Motors is a big success. Bigger than any other manufacturing company. But General Motors has not always been that big. It just got bigger But by using a very simple success method which you can use. It probably started back in the days of Charles F. Kettering who started so many successful things including the self-starter. Now, that seems like a very simple, elemental success method. Until you try to build your career on it. Until you try to build your business on it, as did General Motors. Until you try to build your life and your future on it In fact, most people are not thinking about what others want. Most people want others to give them what they want, to do what they want. At least, more of what others want. Preferably, all of what others want. The more you give people what they want, the more you ultimately will get in return. The size and success of General Motors proves it. The fact is that all of the really successful people, companies and organizations do precisely that. Or they would not long succeed. The mediocrities and the failures are always too preoccupied with trying to get others to do what they want. So they find life filled with resistance. People are not interested in what you want. They are interested in what they want. So in order to get others to give you what you want, you first must give them what they want. You begin by finding out what each of the people who are important to you really wants. The easiest way is just to ask them what they want. You will find others eager to tell you what they want. Especially if you tell them that you will give it to them-or help them get it. Then, do exactly that. Give them what they want-or help them get it. It will make you rich, but it will not make you richer. The way to get richer. The secret is to make improvements in advance of public demand. Well, how do you deliberately improve things? You must deliberately improve not accidentally, not luckily-but deliberately. Then you are given the 61 Magic Questions. All you do is ask yourself the 61 Magic Questions and new, profitable improvements will Hash into your mind like magic! You have learned the first part: Now, the second part: How you can give each person more of exactly what he or she wants. ASKI Ask sincerely, frankly, forthrightly, boldly. The very fact of your asking will greatly improve your relationship. We shall take space for only one example. If you are an employee, ask your employer: What books and trade magazines should I read? What training courses should I take? What additional jobs can I do to enable me to learn more about the business? What am I doing wrong or inefficiently which I can correct and improve? This is what happened:

Chapter 2 : M. R. Kopmeyer | LibraryThing

M. R. Kopmeyer is the retired president of eight corporations and success counsel to companies. He retired, independently wealthy, at the age of fifty and has since devoted his full time to helping others succeed, too.

Why do some people make more money, live happier lives and accomplish much more in the same number of years than the great majority? I started out in life with few advantages. I did not graduate from high school. I worked at menial jobs. I had limited education, limited skills and a limited future. Over the years, I have read thousands of books and articles on the subjects of success and achievement. It seems that the reasons for these accomplishments have been discussed and written about for more than two thousand years, in every conceivable way. One quality that most philosophers, teachers and experts agree on is the importance of self-discipline. It was the lunch break and I was eating at a nearby food fair. The area was crowded and I sat down at the last open table by myself, even though it was a table for four. A few minutes later, an older gentleman and a younger woman who was his assistant came along carrying trays of food, obviously looking for a place to sit. With plenty of room at my table, I immediately arose and invited the older gentleman to join me. He was hesitant, but I insisted. Finally, thanking me as he sat down, we began to chat over lunch. It turned out that his name was Kop Kopmeyer. As it happened, I immediately knew who he was. He was a legend in the field of success and achievement. Kop Kopmeyer had written four large books, each of which contained success principles that he had derived from more than fifty years of research and study. I had read all four books from cover to cover, more than once. It is the magic quality that opens all doors for you, and makes everything else possible. With self-discipline, the average person can rise as far and as fast as his talents and intelligence can take him. But without self-discipline, a person with every blessing of background, education and opportunity will seldom rise above mediocrity. In the pages ahead I will describe seven areas of your life where the practice of self-discipline will be key to your success. These areas include goals, character, time management, personal health, money, courage and responsibility. To learn more about The Power of Discipline, please click here!
