Frontier Communications is an S&P company and is included in the Fortune list of America's largest corporations. Frontier serves a mix of urban, suburban and rural areas across the U.S.

Born in Auburn, New York, Br. Richard died in Valatie, New York on March 13, He was in his 66th year as a professed religious in the Congregation. When the family moved to Pittsburgh, PA in , he attended St. Bernard School for four years. He finished his elementary education at Cathedral Academy, Syracuse, NY in , and his secondary education there in Prior to his entrance into the Congregation, Richard held a variety of jobs in the Syracuse area, including working as a soda fountain attendant in the Corner Book Store, an office boy at Clark Music Company, and finally as a salesperson for the Students Supply Company. Reading books about the lives of St. Brother Richard made his final profession of vows on August 16, Following first profession in summer of , he journeyed to the University of Notre Dame to begin his academic preparation for ministry. He went to St. Richard returned to St. Then, after a one year assignment at St. His expertise as yearbook moderator continued in other schools in the years to come. In , he began graduate studies at Fordham University and obtained his M. In , he decided to make a major shift, exchanging the familiar roles of living in a large community of Brothers and teaching in the classroom, with living in a rectory and serving in parish ministry. He became the Pastoral Associate at St. Anthony of Padua Church in Brooklyn and served there until Richard delighted in this assignment because of his responsibility for a variety of activities and services at the church. He especially liked the proximity to the subway and the easy access it provided to all of Manhattan. He became well-known on a personal level to many of the parishioners because of his visits to the sick and his comforting presence to families at times of loss. He would later state how well he was accepted as a parish minister because he was a Brother of Holy Cross. At the time of his retirement from the parish, he and his pipe collection moved to Holy Cross High School, Flushing. He enjoyed smoking his pipe on the outdoor balcony of the fourth floor residence with a view of the neighborhood from high above. He was well-suited to teaching History and Government; he had a command of facts and in his first years of retirement would read the paper daily and keep up with current events. While in the parish, the dinner table conversation was often engaging and varied because of Br. With mounting health issues related to aging, he retired to St. Joseph Center in Valatie, NY in fall of Two days before his death, Br. Richard was visited by a number of the Brothers. There was no major concern about his health and, in the course of the visit, he received the Anointing of the Sick. The graces of that sacrament may have been what Richard, or the Lord, had been waiting for. May God grant him eternal rest. Tom was with Richard both in Rochester and Flushing. Growing up, our families were not close. She asked him if he could get Richard a black suit so he could enter. Richard never forgot that and fostered a deep love for my dad. I will never forget that love. He and his mom attended my reception of the religious habit. When he was stationed at Cardinal Mooney, believe it or not, my husband to be Brother Hugh used to drive him over to St. Thomas More Convent to visit me on Sunday afternoons! He knew then that we were dating! I think you all know that when you saw Richard, you saw his pipe! And I have a picture of my dad that Richard took that I treasure to this day! In his later years, when he was stationed in Greenpoint, Brooklyn, and at Holy Cross in Flushing, he loved going into Manhattan to walk the streets, walking being another of his addictions in addition to his pipe. While walking, he was also looking for sales on sport shirts! Both Hugh and I remember visiting him and seeing shirt upon shirt still with the price tags on them piled high on a chair. They had never been worn. I think if they fit Hugh he would have taken a few! Throughout our married life, Hugh and I used to visit Richard or meet him in Manhattan for lunch. I never lost touch with Richard. When we first moved to Florida, Richard came to visit us for our first Thanksgiving. We visited him here in Valatie and at Barnwell Nursing Home. I thank you for letting me tell you that he was a great cousin whom I loved dearly. I also feel and believe that he was a loyal and faithful member of Holy Cross for over 65 years! God love him and God love and bless you all.

Photo by Cylla von Tiedemann. I remember after the last production I saw of it, I wished that the day would come when I could see a full out professional production of the show. After years of waiting and hoping, my prayers had finally been answered. That is when I traveled to The Stratford Festival in Canada and gave myself over to absolute pleasure. Their plans are put on hold when they get a flat tire and must seek refuge in a castle that they passed a few miles back. There, they find a group of odd-ball, sex-crazed, characters, including Dr. The story has plot twists, and many holes, but if you have ever seen the movie, the play actually makes more sense believe it or not. Theatre is suppose to create a connection between the audience and the actors on stage, and an experience is to be created that will never be remounted. Not only are we as audience members entertained by the brilliant cast, and musicians, but the audience participation is just the icing on the cake. The smile never left my face. Listening to members of the audience yell out perfectly timed one-liners, and seeing the actors take what the audience was dishing up and work with it was magical. Sure, most of the audience contributions were raunchy and sexual, but that is all the fun! This is not a show for the meek mannered. It never has been and it hopefully never will be. The aesthetic is brilliant. Now, projection design is a tricky business because it is easy to pull focus from the actors, but Nesbitt uses subtle imagery that is impactful and hilarious. I also love the Pop art theme that appears as well. Her actors have magnificent ranges and she has them show them off. It is rare that I mention the band in a review, but these musicians know how to rock out. Especially Ian Harper on Tenor Saxophone. Harper whales on that sax throughout the show and it is some of the most beautiful sax playing I have heard in a show ever. There is not one person who does not deserve to be on that stage. Each actor takes their character and makes it unique, but we as the audience still love it. Leading the show as Brad, Sayer Roberts is hilarious as the dorky point-dexter, and has the comedic chops to make his act two bedroom scene with Frank, one of the funniest things I have ever seen. Robert Markus kills it as Riff-Raff. His vocal range is so spectacular that your ears have trouble understanding that his is singing so high. His facial expressions and timing are perfect for this part. Kimberly-Ann Truong as Columbia is a great choice. She is a firecracker and is a true audience favorite. Dan Chameroy was made to play Frank-N-Furter. Not only does he possess wonderful comedic abilities, but he also hams it up on stage so incredibly well. He deserves to wear those fishnets. Director Donna Feore has mounted a perfect production. This show will go down in Stratford history as being one of the best. For more information, click here.
