Hollywood Undercover: Revealing the Sordid Secrets of Tinseltown is a non-fiction book about the culture of Hollywood society, written by investigative journalist and author Ian Halperin.

Second, the story line had potential but it was taking forever to even hold some semblance of interest from my end. Now she is an A-lister rock superstar, Lexxie Rock, having skyrocketing to fame and is living in a Beverly Hills mansion. Bash came back from college and became a firefighter for the Tucson Fire Department, living th Review Rating: Unfortunately, it turns out that this woman is not who he thinks she is and furthermore, he sustains an injury during a call which forces him to undergo mandatory surgery, rehab, and recovery. And she is even more attractive to him now. Alexandra was stuck in a hard place. She really wanted to be there for her father as soon as she was notified, but she wanted to preserve his privacy while he recovered from his grave illness, or else the press would make everything impossible for them if they found out she was in town. So she hatches a plan to remain incognito to dodge the limelight, to care for her father, and to get over her recent relationship which had gone south and, to her horror, very publicly. Pressures on both Alexandra and Bash begin to pull them apart, and it is up to them to weed through what is real and what is not to see if they can really have a go at a life together. Good story, with a lot of introspective musings which gave greater depth to the characters, but they kept the pace generally slower than other stories I have read from this author. Sexy chemistry when Alexandra and Bash were together, though ;-D Kindle Edition This is a great story filled with love. Lexxie Rock is a famous rock star and is caught up in the media everyday to the point her private life is exposed to her on TV. Once Alexandra, Lexxie finds out her dad is sick she goes home as her cousin Alex to keep the media away from her. Bash has lived next door to Alexandra his entire life and is friendly with her father. When Bash is hurt during work as a firefights 5. He knows what she is doing and keeps her secret. Bash has just been through a tough breakup with a woman who was actually married without him knowing and trying to recover from an injury. Alexandra had her boyfriend cheat on her and there is a video of it shown on TV live! Bash and Alex spend time together and I enjoyed their interactions. Will Alex ever feel safe with Bash to let on who she really is? I love how Bash saved her and took all the secrets in stride but how long will he let Alex pretend to be someone else? I voluntarily reviewed an Advance Reader Copy of this book. Bella Love-Wins is a phenomenal author and one of my absolute favorites. Hollywood Undercover is about a twenty something young female rockstar named Alexandra. Alex has definitely dated her share of losers, and the current one Wilkes was just another. Then there was Sebastian, a firefighter in the town of Tucson. While on the phone with his girlfriend Aileen having phone sex, he hears another! So when Alexandra an Fantabulous! So when Alexandra and Sebastian cross paths will sparks fly? Or go up in flames like all her other relationships. Hollywood Undercover is simply fantabulous! I hope you love the story as well as I did.

In Hollywood Undercover, he gives us a unique and scandalous glimpse behind the scenes of the movie business. This time he poses as an aspiring actor and soon finds himself with an agent, a job offer (admittedly in a hardcore porn film) and ultimately a part in The Aviator, directed by Martin Scorsese.

Hollywood is an ethnically diverse, densely populated neighborhood in the central region of Los Angeles, California. It is notable as the home of the U. Hollywood was a community in and was incorporated as a municipality in . It was consolidated with the city of Los Angeles in , in , one adobe hut stood in Nopalera, named for the Mexican Nopal cactus indigenous to the area. By , an agricultural community flourished, the area was known as the Cahuenga Valley, after the pass in the Santa Monica Mountains immediately to the north. According to the diary of H. Whitley, known as the Father of Hollywood, along came a Chinese man in a wagon carrying wood. The man got out of the wagon and bowed, the Chinese man was asked what he was doing and replied, I holly-wood, meaning hauling wood. Whitley had an epiphany and decided to name his new town Hollywood, Holly would represent England and wood would represent his Scottish heritage. Whitley had already started over towns across the western United States, Whitley arranged to buy the acre E. Hurd ranch and disclosed to him his plans for the land. They agreed on a price and Hurd agreed to sell at a later date, before Whitley got off the ground with Hollywood, plans for the new town had spread to General Harrison Gray Otis, Hurds wife, eastern adjacent ranch co-owner Daeida Wilcox, and others. Daeida Wilcox may have learned of the name Hollywood from Ivar Weid, her neighbor in Holly Canyon and she recommended the same name to her husband, Harvey. In August , Wilcox filed with the Los Angeles County Recorders office a deed and parcel map of property he had sold named Hollywood, Wilcox wanted to be the first to record it on a deed. The early real-estate boom busted that year, yet Hollywood began its slow growth. By , the region had a post office, newspaper, hotel, Los Angeles, with a population of , lay 10 miles east through the vineyards, barley fields, and citrus groves. A single-track streetcar line ran down the middle of Prospect Avenue from it, but service was infrequent, the old citrus fruit-packing house was converted into a livery stable, improving transportation for the inhabitants of Hollywood. The Hollywood Hotel was opened in by H. Whitley who was a president of the Los Pacific Boulevard, having finally acquired the Hurd ranch and subdivided it, Whitley built the hotel to attract land buyers. Flanking the west side of Highland Avenue, the structure fronted on Prospect Avenue, the hotel was to become internationally known and was the center of the civic and social life and home of the stars for many years. Whitleys company developed and sold one of the residential areas

A hardcover or hardback book is one bound with rigid protective covers. It has a flexible, sewn spine which allows the book to lie flat on a surface when opened, following the ISBN sequence numbers, books of this type may be identified by the abbreviation Hbk. Hardcover books are printed on acid-free paper, and are much more durable than paperbacks. Hardcover books are more costly to manufacture. If brisk sales are anticipated, an edition of a book is typically released first. Some publishers publish paperback originals if slow hardback sales are anticipated, for very popular books these sales cycles may be extended, and followed by a mass market paperback edition typeset in a more compact size and printed on shallower, less hardy paper. In the past the release of an edition was one year after the hardback. It is very unusual for a book that was first published in paperback to be followed by a hardback, an example is the novel The Judgment of Paris by Gore Vidal, which had its revised edition of first published in paperback, and later in hardcover. Hardcover books are sold at higher prices than comparable paperbacks. Hardcovers typically consist of a block, two boards, and a cloth or heavy paper covering. The pages are sewn together and glued onto a flexible spine between the boards, and it too is covered by the cloth, a paper wrapper, or dust jacket, is usually put over the binding, folding over each horizontal end of the boards. On the folded part, or flap, over the front cover is generally a blurb, the back flap is where the biography of the author can be found. Reviews are often placed on the back of the jacket, bookbinding

After the release of The Jazz Singer, the first partially talking film, Hughes becomes obsessed with shooting his film realistically, despite the film being a hit, Hughes remains unsatisfied with the end result and orders the film to be recut after its Hollywood premiere. He becomes romantically involved with actress Katharine Hepburn, who helps to ease the symptoms of his worsening obsessive-compulsive disorder, in , Hughes test flies the H-1

Racer, pushing it to a new speed record. Three years later, he breaks the record by flying around the world in four days. Hughes quickly finds a new love interest with year-old Faith Domergue, however, he still has feelings for Hepburn, and blackmails a reporter to keep reports about her and the married Tracy out of the press. Hughes secures a contract with the Army Air Forces for two projects, a spy aircraft and a transport unit. In , with the Spruce Goose flying boat still in construction, Hughes finishes the XF reconnaissance aircraft, however, one of the engines fails midflight, and the aircraft crashes in Beverly Hills, with Hughes getting severely injured. With the end of World War II, the army cancels its order for the H-4 Hercules, when he is discharged, he is informed that he must choose between funding the airlines or his flying boat. Hughes orders Dietrich to mortgage the TWA assets so he can continue the development, as his OCD worsens, Hughes becomes increasingly paranoid, planting microphones and tapping Gardners phone lines to keep track of her. The FBI searches his home for incriminating evidence of war profiteering, searching his possessions and, to his horror, Brewster privately offers to drop the charges if Hughes sells TWA to Trippe, but Hughes refuses. Hughes OCD symptoms become extreme, and he retreats into an isolated germ-free zone for three months, Trippe has Brewster summon him for a Senate investigation, certain that Hughes will not show up. Gardner visits him and personally grooms and dresses him in preparation for the hearing, an invigorated Hughes defends himself against Brewsters charges and accuses the senator of taking bribes from Trippe 6.
