

Chapter 1 : Kirk Franklin - I'll Be Satisfied Lyrics | MetroLyrics

I'll be satisfied. When I meet the ransomed over on the golden shore I'll be satisfied There I'll join the angels singing praises ever more I'll be satisfied.

The text was written by Joe H. I have no further information about the author or the date, circumstances, and original publication of the song. The tune was composed by T. I have no further information about the composer either, other than that he is listed as the owner. One might assume that the author and the composer were related. The only other one of our books where it is found is Sacred Selections. Among various denominational books in my collection, it was used in the Favorite Songs and Hymns published by the Stamps-Baxter Music and Printing Co. Green for use among the Primitive Baptists. The song focuses our attention on the blessings that we expect to receive in heaven. We know that one of the activities that engage the attention of the victorious in eternity will be singing: Just as Joshua led the Israelites into the promised land of Canaan, our hope is to be led by Jesus into the promised land of rest above: The singing that will be characteristic of the promised land above will certainly include praising Christ for His grace and love: Heaven is pictured as a city with a wall, gates, and a street: In this city the soul and the glorified body, too will never die because there will be no more death: As usual, Ellis J. Crum in Sacred Selections changed the third line of this stanza to "saved ones" lest brethren think that they might possibly have a loved one in heaven; when I sing about "loved ones" in heaven, I understand that only those who are saved will be there, but based upon the promises of God, I do hope to see those among my loved ones who were faithful Christians there, as well as those of the saved who have become my loved ones: One aspect of our hope of eternity is to meet the ransomed, because in heaven all His servants shall serve Him and reign forever and ever: This will be across the sea of glass which now separates us from the throne of God and "over on the golden shore" of the river of water of life: There, the ransomed will join the angels in praising Christ who redeemed us: The chorus continues to point out that when we dwell with God in heaven we shall be truly satisfied. That may be true in some instances, and if it is done to the exclusion of other good hymns of praise and admonition, then perhaps we have been a bit unbalanced.
