

Chapter 1 : introduction to psychology | eBay

We used this textbook for my AP Psychology class, and it served its purpose well. The book does an excellent job at covering everything and giving an introduction to the field. Plenty of good examples, as well as diagrams and such to help explain, are given.

Ancient History 2 Unit The Preliminary Ancient History course begins by offering students the chance to examine the methods used by Historians and Archaeologists to investigate the past, and consider the impact of Science on these disciplines and the ethical issues which arise. Resistance to Roman Rule and Roman Britain. Students also undertake their own Historical Investigation.

Business Studies 2 Unit This course is aimed at students who will be seeking a career in the business world, whether it is after completing the HSC or further tertiary studies. The course looks into the activities of business and how a business is organised. Operations, Marketing, Human Resources and Finance.

Economics 2 Unit This is an interesting and challenging course and one that gives valuable information to students about current economic problems and possible solutions. This is particularly pertinent in view of the fact that all students will soon be of voting age and will be asked to make a critical assessment of present government policies. Thus this subject is relevant to all students wishing to study economics, journalism, accountancy or business degrees at College and Universities.

Extension History 1 Unit At the end of Year 11 students are given the opportunity to undertake a further unit of History called History Extension. These students undertake a major historical Project into a topic of their own choosing. They also study the nature of History and how and why interpretations change over time.

Geography 2 Unit Geography is a popular elective for students in Years 11 and 12. At this level students are engaged in contemporary social, physical and political global issues which prepares them to pursue tertiary studies in a wide range of disciplines. In each year compulsory geographical fieldwork takes place.

Legal Studies 2 Unit This course is designed to assist students to understand the way the legal system works; to understand how the law operates to resolve conflicts and regulate social behaviour; and to appreciate the role of the law in every aspect of our lives. These skills will form an excellent foundation preparing students for University or College courses in law, commerce, journalism, real estate, social work, criminology, information technology or arts. The core study is the World at the Beginning of the Twentieth Century.

Modern History Students currently study Germany, Leni Riefenstahl and the Conflict in the Pacific but these topics may vary from year to year.

Society and Culture 2 Unit The central concern of this subject is the interaction of persons, societies, cultures, environments and time. Society and Culture draws on cross-disciplinary concepts and social research methodologies from anthropology, communication, cultural studies, media studies, philosophy, psychology, social ecology and sociology. This subject has direct relevance to the immediate needs of students and to their future lives by enabling students to develop understanding of:

Each of our subjects titles indicate the broad area of study yet each has its own specialities which appeal to students for their relevance to the contemporary and dynamic society in which they live. Therefore, it is not uncommon that a student may study a variety of our subjects consecutively. They relish the opportunities to engage the students in new and diverse teaching and learning practices which excite and challenge them to gain maximum benefit and enjoyment from these subjects.

The document shows how these aspects can be incorporated in teaching and learning programs, and how these programs are underpinned by the principles of assessment for learning. These sample teaching and learning sequences can be used as models for planning work for other options. Teachers can choose to use some of the suggested teaching activities as assessment items. Establishing a scope and sequence plan A fundamental step in the design of effective teaching and learning programs is the establishment of a scope and sequence plan. This plan provides an overview of the teaching and learning sequences to be taught and details the placement, sequence and duration of teaching and learning sequences. When establishing a plan there are a number of factors to be considered. Course requirements The course acknowledges that schools require flexibility to design their International Studies programs to best meet their specific needs and circumstances. Schools should refer to the course structure and decide on the most appropriate course of study. When establishing a scope and sequence plan the following course requirements must be met: Sample scope and sequence plans As the core has been written as an introduction to cultural diversity in the world, it is recommended that it be taught at the beginning of the course. Assessment for learning helps teachers and students to determine if that current understanding is a suitable basis for future learning. Assessment occurs as an integral part of teaching and learning. Teacher instruction and assessment influences student learning and the learning process. This involves using assessment activities to clarify student understanding of concepts, and planning ways to remedy misconceptions and promote deeper understanding. Assessment for learning encourages self-assessment and peer assessment. Students can develop and use a range of strategies to actively monitor and evaluate their own learning and the learning strategies they use. The feedback that students receive from completing assessment activities will help teachers and students decide whether they are ready for the next phase of learning or whether they need further learning experiences to consolidate their knowledge, understanding and skills. Teachers should consider the effect that assessment and feedback has on motivation and self-esteem, and the importance of the active involvement of students in their own learning. In other words, teachers are able to extend assessment for learning into the assessment of learning process. Culture and cultural diversity in the contemporary world 50 indicative hours Focus: Students study the concept of culture and its many characteristics, and examples of cultural diversity in the contemporary world. Your class has decided to write an article about culture is.
