Jack loves playing on his scooter, he and Teddy zoom up and down until Jack trips over Teddy and he and the scooter topple over. This storybook for young children contains pull-the-tab and lift-the-flap fun.

John Burns March 7, 38 Some days are better than others. He was a cop in Baltimore before coming back home to Lynchburg a while ago. A few years ago Dave met Brian Klock of Klock Werks fame, another guy from a small town with a strong work ethic, and the two bonded. Last year Brian and JD collaborated on a Limited Edition Chieftain, and all of those sold out in eight minutes, they tell us. The winner will be announced in October, following the Firehouse Expo. Two-tone matte black paint makes the real karat gold graphics on the tank and fenders pop. Fender struts, hand control levers, valve covers, and exhaust tips get premium gloss black finishes to show off the gold Indian Scout badging. One-of-a-kind Montana Silversmith badge IDs your bike with karat gold. The chopped fenders, bar-end mirrors, vented exhaust shields, knobby tires and headlight nacelle were already in place. Delivery of bikes should start in August. Of course we had to take it for a little spin. It goes just like a Scout Bobber, because the drivetrain and suspension were left as is. Fine by me; horsepower is enough. Or afternoon, in this case. Will you take a check? That whiskey is in wooden barrels which is what makes it whiskey, and a little bit of highly flammable alcohol is always in the air wherever 20, of them are stacked up. It only takes one spark to start a truly impressive conflagration, with barrels cooking off like shells in an ammo dump. Have a look at the Heaven Hill fire in Kentucky, where 90, barrels of bourbon went up in flames. In that one, whiskey barrels reportedly rocketed across the sky like shooting stars, and a two-mile long stretch of the creek that supplied water to the distillery was set ablaze. Hence the million dollar Pierce fire truck. JD is the only distillery in the world with its own fire brigade, staffed entirely by employee volunteers. Jack Daniel moved his operation here in for the water that flows out of Cave Springs, on its way here to the distillery. The whole area is shot through with limestone caverns that filter all the iron out of the water but leave the good minerals in. JD never married, but owned two saloons, lived with a sister he had nine siblings and was reportedly quite the ladies man. The moral of the story is, never go to work early. The area is riddled with limestone caves. When Dave wanted to show the New York insurance inspectors this one was safe, he asked his buddy if he had a canary to bring along to test the air? The inspectors were so interested in the guy with the chicken on a string they barely inspected the cave and it passed. Still, only us VIPs get in. Making maple into charcoal. Quality control testing the charcoal. Chris Fletcher is assistant master distiller. JD buys white oak trees to make its own; a good cooper can knock out barrels a day. How that barrel is toasted, then fired to draw out its sugars is a JD proprietary secret. JD is what you call Tennessee whiskey. Mostly it removes the aroma of corn. Somewhere along the way he developed an acute sense of flavor or possibly just a remarkable tolerance for alcohol. Storing the barrels in different warehouses and different parts of the warehouse varies the flavor, but they keep the end product consistent by blending barrels together before bottling. That means more concentrated flavor and higher proof. Your JD Green Label is a lighter, less mellow whiskey from barrels on the lower floors and more toward the center of the warehouse, where the whiskey matures more slowly. To be perfectly honest I was never a big fan of No. After that, the distillery had to step up production to meet demand. Dave Stang may be retired but he never rests. Sadly, I could only toast Mr. Daniel with an Arnold Palmer, since it was barely lunchtime here.
