He was engaged, excited, and loved the different games to keep him challenged. My son tested at the top of his class. The school wanted to skip him to the next grade because of all the knowledge he retained from the games.

Oral Language Skills Vocabulary means the number of words a child knows. In Jumpstart, children learn new words when reading storybooks. Corps members tell children what new words mean. Corps members help children understand more about the world around them. Book and Print Skills Alphabet knowledge is when a child knows letters of the alphabet and their sounds. Meaning and use of print is when a child knows that writing has meaning. Corps members and children write and draw while they play. Writing happens all over the classroom. Phonological or Sound Awareness Skills Phonemic awareness is when a child can hear separate sounds in words. Children listen for beginning or ending sounds of words in Circle time. Rhyme awareness is when a child can hear and make rhymes. Corps members and children read poems together. Jumpstart curriculum is always evolving as research continues to emerge about the best strategies in early learning. See the Results How It Works Jumpstart programs are made possible with the help of volunteers from local colleges and the community, who serve in a variety of preschool settings in low-income communities such as Head Start programs, community based classrooms, and public school pre-K. Our Corps members typically commit to serving a minimum of hours over the course of the school year and engage children twice a week for two hour sessions. Click here to learn more about our Corps members. Jumpstart provides children with a consistent routine, low child-to-adult ratios, and positive, meaningful interactions with adults. The curriculum also provides a balance of child-initiated and adult-guided learning opportunities. All of these factors contribute to the progress a child makes towards lifelong success in school and beyond. On any given week during the school year, more than 1, Jumpstart sessions are taking place across the country. A typical Jumpstart session follows this routine: Welcome Children transition to Jumpstart from their previous activity. Children build alphabet knowledge through exploration of name cards and over time develop an understanding of the meaning and use of print. Reading Children and Corps members engage in a shared reading experience. Circle Time Children participate by singing songs, playing word and letter games, and reading poems. The whole-group learning experience builds a sense of community among children and adults. Here, children have the opportunity to explore new ideas and information, learn about objects and their use, and understand how things work. Sharing and Goodbye Children talk and listen to others share their favorite session activities in a large group setting. Together, we can help all children build the key language and literacy skills they need to take on the world.
