I really have no idea how to review this book, honestly. All I know is that Night should be required reading. Night is very simply written, it is shocking in its starkness. The other two books Dawn, and the Accident are follow ups to Night. Dawn deals with Elisha contemplating the murder of an army captain for political purposes in Palestine, and the Accident has him pondering the idea of suicide as the past is too much to bear. I did not like these to the extent of Night, but they are great books in their own right. The writing in these two books is simple as well and its emotions honest. By this, I sense that what Oddly enough, in reading Night I thought of it as a coming of age story, a Bildungsroman set in a concentration camp. By this, I sense that what Wiesel must have had to tolerate in order to survive was much more horrible than anyone can manage to frame in words. For this reason, he held off telling his story for many years. The young Wiesel is told by an itinerant rabbi: Man raises himself toward God by the questions he asks Him. That is the true dialogue. Man questions God and God answers. You will find the true answers Eliezer, only within yourself. Elie Wiesel was forced to constantly say Kaddish for fellow inmates of the concentration camp who were detained with him but also for his family and eventually for his own lost faith in God. On a particular day in Auschwitz, Elie Wiesel heard a fellow inmate declaring, "Blessed be the name of the Eternal" and reflected: Why should I bless Him? In every fiber I rebelled. This day I had ceased to plead. I was no longer capable of lamentation. On the contrary, I felt very strong. I was the accuser, God was the accused. Without love or mercy. I had ceased to be anything but ashes, yet I felt stronger than the Almighty, to whom my life had been tied for so long. I stood amidst those praying, observing it like a stranger.

Elie Wiesel fue deportado junto a sus padres y su hermana en la primavera de El 11 de abril de fue liberado el campo de Buchenwald. A ellos dedica este libro. No paramos el coche. Por entonces, igual que hoy, Israel hostigaba duramente a los palestinos de la franja de Gaza. A las afueras estaba Birkenau Auschwitz II. Un gigantesco, inmenso descampado rodeado por una alambrada. A la derecha, a lo lejos, unos cuantos barracones de madera en los que eran metidos los presos. Y un inmenso cielo azul en el que flotaban algunas nubes blancas. Los diferentes bloques de ladrillo. Sus rostros, los trajes a rayas, sus zapatos, sus maletas. Me lo sigo preguntando. Seguro que los directores leyeron La noche antes de rodarlas. Las alambradas que, con una muralla, nos cercaban, no nos inspiraban reales temores. Los nazis quieren simplemente apoderarse de nuestras joyas. Escribe Wiesel sobre su traslado desde el campo de Birkenau hasta el de Auschwitz: Flotaban en el aire perfumes primaverales.. Pero apenas caminamos unos instantes, percibimos las alambradas del otro campo. Se centra en el miedo, la angustia, el hambre, la incredulidad, la crueldad, los conflictos entre los propios presos. A veces, incluso pinta situaciones en las que se puede respirar. Por encima de todo, es el relato de la supervivencia junto a su padre a lo largo de aquellos doce interminables meses.
