Then there are the other, non-foreign policy positions of Sessions that will be galling to all progressives. Ranked as one of the most conservative members of Congress, his positions on civil rights, gay marriage, race relations, immigration and abortion rights follow conservative orthodoxy. The list of his domestic policy red flags goes on and on. In any case, Sessions is not widely regarded as a foreign policy expert. Despite his membership on the Senate Armed Services Committee, national security policy is not his strong suit. Picking Sessions came not long after Sessions issued his endorsement of Trump, one of the first major figures in the Republican establishment to do so. With his solid standing within the more conservative wing of the party, Sessions is a valuable asset to protect Trump against charges that he is not a real Republican, nor a real conservative. Whether Trump really intends to take counsel from this new chief adviser on foreign policy is another matter, a question of strategy and not electoral tactics. In this sense, Trump may have been too clever by half. A person who regularly communicates with me summarized the challenges facing Trump in formulating foreign policy as follows: I sense he is ready for this, but the military people Sessions will recruit have contrary instincts and no regional knowledge. Trump does best tapping into the real conservatives who are closer to Rand Paul and worship the Reagan of Even the retired Gen. The first task for a President Trump would be to take us back from the brink of nuclear war with Russia. In the context of needless confrontations with Moscow, which have produced a feverish atmosphere of mutual distrust, preemptive nuclear strikes have become all too thinkable. Trump and his team should be ready to discuss and to act on a desperate need for a new security architecture in Europe that brings Russia in from the cold. Only after these debts in arrears are resolved can we proceed in positive territory to revising the rules of global governance and replacing rancor and discord with concerted actions by all the big global players. This is the foreign policy which the American public has backed in opinion poll after opinion poll over the past 30 years. It is the policy which the establishment elites have denied us for too long. His latest book Does Russia Have a Future? August is available in paperback and e-book from Amazon.

[Lu Ann Faylor Snyder; Phillip A Snyder:] -- These letters among two women and their husband offer a rare look into the personal dynamics of an LDS polygamous relationship during the years when polygamy and its more prominent advocates came.

FOS would like to acknowledge some special people who made the weekend so great. First, the Barager family very nicely allowed the FOS to gather some artifacts from the old Enterprise office. Not so much dollar value, but the historical value is priceless. We hope many saw our display of our dear friend, Virginia Barager. Then Harry and Reva from the Potting Shed Greenhouse decided it was time to close the greenhouse for the season, and donated countless geraniums and baskets. Then, in the midst of all the activities, Dr. Gelhaus called to say he had something for us. It turned out to be a whole wall. They are remodeling the dental office, and in doing so uncovered a wall with a poster. It first went into the dumpster, but Dr. Tom rescued it and brought most of it home and called us. It is now in pieces, while we do some research. We are thankful there are people who recognize the value of preservation. Not everything old needs to be trashed. Another person who donates her time and talents is Anita Schultz. Every year she makes and donates two quilts. This year she did three. So, we put two out for the raffle, and will raffle the other one plus the chainsaw carved bear in our September show. If any readers are ever aware of something old, being in danger of demolition, please find one of the FOS members. Local history needs to be kept and treasured here at home. Finally, if there are any old car buffs out there, one of our members had an old postcard showing the Owen Enterprise in very early days. Along the street are old cars. This picture was blown up to poster size, and shows many cars as well as early businesses some time in the ? More news later as this is a busy time. Owen Days over-all was a success. So, we welcome readers to apply for this new show. Antiques, original artwork, carvings, etc. The roof problem is being addressed in August. Then another Tool Show is scheduled for Sept. They are always popular. If any reader has an hour or so a week, we can use extra hands. I will probably be in the gym most days from 10 a. And suddenly, it feels like fall. Oh well, soon the fields will be white. But wait, not yet! The Old School will be busy in September. So far, raffle items include a very large chainsaw carved bear, a handmade quilt, and a few other surprises. Vendors will need to register, but spaces are free. Plans are underway to feature more musical events this winter, and possibly some classes – arts, crafts, personal wellness, etc. Many people came in to view our growing number of military articles and clothing. Following the open house, the stage floor got a nice coat of paint. Then, cement work began. There was another auction in mid-June, and Fair Days looming, so we hoped we could squeeze the project in sometime between. The City of Owen helped with the removal of the old stuff, and was that a job. No more cracked front slab, or crooked step. For a few days, we had a big hole. Then, Jake Adams and his crew came. It was interesting to watch. They first dealt with the new handicap ramp in back, and then started on the front; sidewalk first, then the slab and section near the street, and finally the new front step. Just in time for Fair Days and Marketplace. After our big weekend, the gym was busy with Girl Scouts. They camped outside under the trees, and had their workshops in the gym. It was attended by most of the separate groups in the county, and a pleasant time was had. Following that came a private wedding and reception. They enjoyed having the gym during the hottest weekend this year. We are now getting things in order for the September Arts Fest and Marketplace. We already have two items for our raffle, with yet a quilt and cement items to be added. It sure is a worry.
