The #1 New York Times bestselling author Mary Higgins Clark has written thirty-seven suspense novels, four collections of short stories, a historical novel, a memoir, and two children's books.

Ronald Thompson knows he never killed Nina Peterson yet in two days the state of Connecticut will take his life, having found him guilty via due process of law. Not even the love and friendship of Sharon Martin, a journalist who is slowly becoming a part of their world, will ever erase their bitter memories. Only time, perhaps, will heal their wounds. But in the shadows a stranger waits, a cunning psychopath who has killed before, who has unfinished business at the Peterson home. Review: The story revolves around Steve Peterson. Two and a half years ago, his wife was brutally murdered, the source of death was suffocation. She was suffocated to death using her own scarf. The crime scene was witnessed by their then three-year old son Neil. The perpetrator, or what they believed, was now being held under police care and is up for a death penalty after two days. As usual, the story is quite different to her other stories before. I love the idea actually, I love that this story also tackles about the death penalty which has been starting to make noise here in the Philippines. It took me quite a long time but finally I was able to guess the real bad guy. He is also known as recording their victims and taking their pictures after killing them. For the main characters, I love how two opposite personalities were able to fall in lov. But I was glad to find out how little by little, Neil was starting to like her considering their circumstances. The culprit was surprisingly convincing and is really lewd at the same time. The characters were fine and they were able to do their roles well. Whether we like it or not, there are really some people who oppose us and some who will point us to a wrong direction. The final few chapters were death defying and so thrilling that it was really hard for me to put it down. It was quite a happy ending with only 1 character end up being dead. Not totally what I have in mind but still was a good way to end this story. As usual, this story is very reader friendly which is what I always love about MHC. The writing style is impeccable and the story, the twists and turns were quite clever especially how she makes all the characters connected to each other.

A Stranger is Watching is an interesting book on a few levels, but mostly that it is so unabashedly anti-capital punishment. Like most readers, I like my personal views to be exalted in fiction. Like most readers, I like my personal views to be exalted in fiction.
