But with the Mattel take over this source has been discontinued. Mattel now produced a giant size poster for the miniature line. I am not sure if dealers are still getting a dealers catalog or not. The chances are No!. Over the years, pocket catalogs have become a collector item. Collector look for pocked catalogs released for different markets. Some of the pocket catalogs have appreciated in value a lot. For many years there was only one major catalog for Matchbox Collectors by Schiffer Publishers. It was not until when Charlie Mack decided to picture his collection and released catalogs. So far he has released several different catalogs including "The Encyclopedia of Matchbox Toys. Following is a list of all the publications on Matchbox that I am aware of. The following publications are what I consider as catalogs. They include color pictures and price guide. Please note that price guide in these catalogs is only a guide. The actual price of the model vary based on the market value and what a collector is willing to pay. A complete catalog on Matchbox Regular Wheels Toys covering almost every single toy made by Matchbox from - A must for a Yesteryear collector. Please Contact Mattel directly or the clubs for such releases. The following publications are what I do not considered as catalogs but are good source of information about Matchbox Toys. Scholl Universe Publishing Printed in Aug by Mattel This is an excellent book on Matchbox toys covering the first fifty years of Matchbox history.

Thursday, July 7, Matchbox Cars: Diecast Toys with a Long History You might think that Matchbox cars and Hot Wheels are interchangeable, but you would be sorely mistaken. Both lines of diecast toy cars have very different histories and paths to greatness. Matchbox cars grew out of a company that began in by two former Navy friends in London - Leslie and Rodney Smith no relation. They combined their names to form "Lesney Products" and decided to start die-casting from a vacant pub that had been burned out during World War II. After they purchased the building, the two friends began making die cast zinc alloy components for the industry and military uses. Lesney first marketed its cars in the United States in Slight color and style variations are common due to paint or part shortages - these cars with the slight differences are now highly collectible. SuperFast In the s, Matchbox was producing 5 million cars a week today, its dropped to about 75 million a year. This was also when they started putting dates on the bottom of the cars. To compete with the popularity of the flashy Hot Wheels by Mattel to be discussed later, keep reading! In , Matchbox issued a 40th Anniversary set of 5 models that were replicas of the 5 originals. This set was repackaged in as the Matchbox Originals a 2nd series was released in In , the Matchbox line was again sold - this time to Tyco Toys. Then, during the Fall of through May Matchbox and Tyco Toys was sold to its former die-cast car rival - Mattel. Our next post will give you the low-down on Hot Wheels - so sit back, buckle up, and stay tuned! The above information was compiled from the following sources: Huxford, Sharon and Bob, eds. Antique to Modern Price Guide. Identification and Value Guide.
