Biographical Sketch of Stephen T. Logan. STEPHEN TRIGG LOGAN, the eminent subject of these memoirs, was born in Franklin county, Kentucky, on February 24th, His paternal ancestry were of Irish or Scotch-Irish extraction, his great grandfather having emigrated from Ireland and settled in Augusta county, Virginia, about the year

Additional Information In lieu of an abstract, here is a brief excerpt of the content: He was admitted to the Kentucky bar at age twenty. After relocating to Illinois, the Illinois legislature elected Logan judge of the First Judicial Circuit in ; he presided at the court from January until March , when he resigned and returned to law practice. In Logan formed a partnership with Abraham Lincoln, whom he had met when Lincoln ran for the state legislature in Logan and Lincoln dissolved their partnership by mutual agreement in President Lincoln appointed Logan in to a commission in Cairo, Illinois , charged with investigating claims against the government. The following statement was recorded by John G. Then there came a great change in the weather. After the 16th of May I think there was but one shower until the 7th of September and that just Stephen Trigg Logan [9] only enough to wet the dust. That summer it was quite common to see the soil cracked open. I have seen it in places so that I could put my hand down into the crack. Very soon after I came I began to get the symptoms of the chills and fever , and then I wished I had never left Kentucky. In those days I have often seen ten wagons going back to where I saw one coming this way. In those days we were bringing seed corn from Kentucky, and all our flour came from Cincinnati. That was the year of the Black Hawk warâ€”the troops came through here, and the road from here to Sangamon river was all dust for one hundred yards wide, where there was low brush. The Sangamon river was so low that year that by laying a few rocks, one could cross it dry shod almost any where. Many people doubted then whether this country could be inhabited at all. I would have gone right back to Kentucky if I could have had a railroad to go on. I became acquainted with Lincoln that year. They were making a canvass for the legislature. I had very soon got acquainted with Stuart, because we were both Whigs. Stuart and Lincoln were the only two men who attracted my attention in that canvass. I never saw Lincoln until he came up here to make a speech. I saw Lincoln before he went up into the stand to make his speech. But after he began speaking I became very much interested in him. He made a very sensible speech. It was the time when Benton was running his theory of gold circulation. It was a speech of perhaps half an hour long. All the candidates made speeches. The meeting was held at the old Court house where the present State House stands. You are not currently authenticated. View freely available titles:
