I should feel scared. Apprehensive at the very least. But all I feel is pure, unadulterated joy. Any doubts I may have about this wedding, about getting married, about spending the rest of my life with Dan have nothing whatsoever to do with Dan. And everything to do with his mother. Dan and Linda talk on the phone every day. Green writes in a way that has you tumbling into the book rather like Alice down the rabbit hole, and becoming part of it all. Green is very perceptive about relationships - family relationships, friendships, whatever - she just always seems to hit the nail on the head. She has written an captivating tale of the changing family dynamics with the introduction of a new person into the family unit. The jostling for positions, the need for give and take, the expectations, the disappointments, the settling into the new relationships are all dealt with by Green in her usual warm and insightful style. Green has used this to great effect in The Other Woman. There is a lot to be learned from The Other Woman. It should be required reading for all brides-to-be and mothers-in-law to be. Thank you Jane Green for yet another wonderful read. Together with writing books and blogs, she contributes to various publications, both online and print, including anthologies and novellas, and features for The Huffington Post, The Sunday Times, Cosmopolitan and Self. Good Taste, with Berkley in October. When she is not writing, cooking, gardening, filling her house with friends and herding chickens, she is usually thanking the Lord for caffeine-filled energy drinks.
