*Monster Trucks (Mean Machines) [Sarah Leveté] on www.nxgvision.com FREE shipping on qualifying offers. Describes a variety of trucks used for work and recreation, including monster trucks, flatbed trucks, tractor-trailers.*

Plot[edit] Episodes take place in the fictional town of Crushington Park, especially in a practice arena full of obstacles and cars to destroy. The reference to Bigfoot the original monster truck appears to be a late addition to the program. The official website also includes video from a pre-Bigfoot version of the pilot episode with a different theme song. Main[edit] Meteor T. Rover voiced by Cameron Ansell â€” A space expeditionary rover-modeled monster truck sporting red tires and the main character of the series. He has tow hook patterns on his tires. Bigfoot voiced by Rod Wilson â€” The most famous monster truck. Bigfoot is always seen at the Crushington Park Speedway practicing with the other famous monster trucks. He is named after the truck of the same name. Has rose patterns on her tires. She knows everything about animals. Has paw-print patterns on her tires. Has pick axe and fire helmet patterns on his tires. Pony Tail voiced by Tajja Isen â€” A pink monster truck sporting a blonde pony tail and horseshoe patterns on her tires. Junkboy voiced by Cliff Saunders â€” A garbage truck-modeled monster truck. Has trash can patterns on his tires. Sarge voiced by Dan Petronijevic â€” A military jeep-modeled monster truck. He typically refers to his friends as "soldiers", hence his military-like personality. Amby voiced by Laurie Elliot â€” An ambulance-modeled monster truck. Has band-aid patterns on his tires. Sinker voiced by Linda Ballantyne â€” A blue-green monster truck decked out in fishing gear and wears a red and yellow checkered hat. Has fish patterns on his tires. Race Announcer voiced by Brad Adamson â€” An unseen announcer who commentates the races the trucks are in. Buck Haymaker voiced by Keith Hampshire â€” A tractor-styled monster truck. Cement Brent â€” A cement truck-styled monster truck. He is the Father of Concrete Pete. Concrete Pete â€” A young cement truck-styled monster truck. He has V patterns on his tires. Crushmeister voiced by Cathal J. Dodd â€” A famous monster truck. He is friends with Big Wheelie. He has cow horn patterns on his tires. King Crush â€” An oversized steamroller-like monster truck from the horror movies. Halftrack voiced by Valerie Boyle â€” A monster truck that once served in the military. She served as substitute teacher while Big Wheelie was competing in a mountain monster truck race. Sue the Rooter â€” A sewage truck-styled monster truck. She has plunger patterns on her tires. Forby Forklift â€” A forklift styled monster truck sporting golden brown tires. Episodes[edit] "Race Relations" â€” Meteor is new to Crushington Park School and is nervous about being in his new school. This is the series premiere. They also learn that teammates need to race with each other, not against each other. The following day after the sleepover, everyone gets tired. The trucks learn that resting up before a race is very important. However, during a race, he loses his pennant. Little Tow tricks the others thinking he is stuck. Ironically, during a race, Little Tow has to be pulled out of the mud. However, the trucks do not listen and they cause a ton of havoc. They all learn that rules are there for a reason. Meteor finds out that he and Big Wheelie are good friends. He feels nervous about this at first, but uses his leadership skills to battle his nervousness. Meteor thinks the nightmare is real. Big Wheelie encourages everyone to practice and how important it is. Meteor also learns that he should never give up on himself. The trucks go through a maze and learn the importance of following directions the first time they are given. However, the trucks see her as a mean angry monster truck at first. They eventually get along with each other. Halftrack, a military monster truck substitutes for Big Wheelie while he is away at a rally. He is very shy at first. Meteor and the gang make Forby feel more welcome by encouraging him to join in a game of Snag the Flag. Cement Brent and Concrete Pete come over to fix the fence. He realizes that babysitting is not an easy job. While they figure out a way to repair it, Bigfoot teaches some of his tricks to Little Tow. But it goes missing and the trucks must find it. Little Tow learns that responsibility is very important. The trucks reminisce about the times they won their races. This is the series finale. In this version, the race announcer would expand more into the episode by reviewing what happened in the episode and a bible scripture tying into the episode. This version partially removes all references of Discovery Kids by replacing its logo with the Rising Star one.

Chapter 2 : Extreme Machines Monster XX RTR monster truck

Mean Machine is a hummer ride truck owned by Greg Price out of Searcy, Arkansas.

The monster XX drove through the grass and fallen leaves with ease. The large tires made a spectacle out of throwing the leaves into the air. This truck is equally at home on pavement as in the grass. My leave covered driveway proved to be exciting. The truck responded well to the controller inputs however, I noticed while adjusting the steering trim, the trim knob operated in reverse. The actual steering was fine and I was still able to make the necessary trim adjustments through out testing. This vehicle uses digital proportional throttle and steering, so if a small throttle input is given, the vehicle will drive slow. As you steadily increase the throttle input, the vehicle gets faster. The same goes for the steering controls. The Monster XX is definitely a fun truck to drive. The bouncy suspension reminds me of my very first hobby grade monster truck. My mother bought it for me in and after building the kit, my black monster truck was the coolest thing in the neighborhood. I drove circles around the other radio controls on the block. Yeah, those were good times. Well, back to present time. I placed a skate board ramp in the yard and hit it full speed several times. The large tires allow easy flight control. The truck held together very well. After several battery charges and both my son and I driving, the Monster XX came through with no major damage. The front diff began to make a little noise after several hard landings, but it still operated fine. I inspected the gears and noticed no excess wear, so I think a shim might quiet it down a bit. The boys made several single wheel landings cartwheels and all plastic parts with stood the beating just fine. I taped my Garmin GPS unit to the truck and set it to record top speed. It was obvious the tires were out of balance, which caused some unwanted wheel bounce. After a few runs, I checked the GPS and it recorded a top speed of I decided to clear the top speed readings and give it a few more tries. After several more attempts, the GPS screen read
