New England is one of the most beautiful parts of the United States of America, oozing with small, charming seaside towns. www.nxgvision.com will fall in love with the stunning scenery, historic buildings, tasty seafood and the unique cultural activities found in these beautiful towns.

Mevagissey, Cornwall Many would agree that Mevagissey is one of the most beautiful examples of a Cornish fishing village. A small harbor filled with working boats surrounded by a tight bundle of houses. Another reason why Mevagissey is on our list is the charm and warmth of the Cornish residents. The village is often chosen as a filming location. Some of the scenes of the Harry Potter Movies were filmed in Lacock. The National Trust owns the entire village of Lacock in order to preserve its untouched character. Photo by Skinnyde 8. Hawkshead, Cumbria Located in the Lake District, this village offers some amazing views. If you are planning to spend the weekend hill-walking, Hawkshead would make a perfect base. You can also find a great Beatrix Potter gallery in the village. Photo by Keith Laverack 7. Eton, Berkshire Only 23 miles away from London, it is one of the most visited villages in all of England. Eton has a great selection of pubs and restaurants, and a great meadow near the river for picnics. Windsor castle is only a 4 minute walk away. Photo by Martin Pettitt 6. Dunster, Somerset In the heart of Dunster you can walk through a market street that has not changed in hundreds of years. This old wool town offers you also the sight of Dunster Castle and Dunster Woods, the home of some of the oldest trees in England. Another notable site is wild Exmoor, a beautiful national park, perfect for walks. Photo by heatheronhertravels 5. Dorchester, Oxfordshire One of the main sights in Dorchester is the beautiful abbey, a comparatively large church for the size of the village. Dorchester is a prime example of the villages in England. It symbolizes a clean, quiet and unspoiled ramshackle feel. Photo by shimgray 4. Avebury, Wiltshire Avebury is truly astonishing. These ancient stones are awe inspiring and incredibly beautiful. They were built thousands of years ago for reasons unknown. Photo by JohnBurke 3. Clovelly, Devon This beautiful little village is an official English heritage site. On the north Devon coast winters offer stormy days and harsh winds. While on hot summer days Clovelly may resemble a Spanish fishing village. If you have difficulties walking, you should avoid the main cobbled street. It is so steep that there are no cars, as wooden sleds are the usual way of transporting items around. Bourton-on-the-Water, Gloucestershire Through the heart of this beautiful village trickles the shallow river Windrush. There are small arched footbridges for pedestrian crossing all over the village. Another great attraction is the houses on the water, all of which are built of local yellow sandstone, making the place vibrate with a friendly ambience. Photo by Marcio Cabral de Moura 1. Castle Combe, Wiltshire An astonishing site, filled with stone houses dating back hundreds of years.

Mirror, Mirror, on the wall, what city is the fairest of them all? Some places stood out for their tranquil vistas, and others made an impression with their enchanting historic districts. Exquisite architecture, natural charm, and a little je ne sais quoi earned these places a spot on the pretty list. Sand dunes and rolling waves border the western edge of Florence, an attractive waterfront town at the mouth of the Siuslaw River. Each spring, roughly 4. Hundreds of flower rows streak this western Michigan city, which is decorated in traditional Dutch architecture, reflecting its European heritage. And to further up its aesthetics, Holland rests on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan, so say hello to blissful beaches and lakefront sunsets. Beaufort, South Carolina Beaufort is the kind of city that is best explored from the seat of a horse-drawn carriage; trot under the moss-covered live oak trees and circle around the antebellum mansions. As for natural beauty, Beaufort is situated among the Sea Islands, surrounded by marshlandâ€”perfect for sunset kayak tours and fishing charters. Flickr via Wesley Fryer Though Galena is the largest city in the county, it preserves a quaint, small-town vibe. The Midwestern town sprawls out on the rolling countryside and along Galena River, a setting that is even more picturesque when you view it from above in a hot air balloon ride. In fact, the vineyards of Yountville look more like the French countryside than the quintessential Cali seascape. This stretch of wine country in Napa Valley is just begging for you to hop on a bicycle and get lost in the grapevines. Port Townsend, Washington Saltwater meets woodlands in this seaside getaway, which is one of only three Victorian seaports in the nation. With its handsome old-fashioned buildings and mansions, the waterfront town could easily be mistaken for a charming New England village. The darling town is dotted with cottages and manors, surrounded by lakes and riversâ€”without a single traffic light in sight. Simons Island, Georgia St. Simons Island has an au naturel appeal. Among the tidal creeks and river shorelines, ancient maritime forests filled with Southern live oaks adorn the mainland. Steamboat Springs, Colorado Thanks to the hot springs, 3 Colorado State Parks, and 2 ski resorts around this mountain town, Steamboat Springs has a lot going for it in the rustic beauty department. The Yampa River babbles along the banks of downtown, while the nearby steamy Strawberry Park Hot Springs place you in a serene natural pool among an aspen grove. The charming historic district is positioned along the southern tip of the peninsula, where the Atlantic Ocean merges with the Delaware Bay.

With only about residents, Grafton is the quintessential tiny New England town. It's a village of strong connections between the people, even continuing to hold traditional town meetings.

The "Yachting Capital of America" has major picture-postcard potential, especially in summer, when the harbor fills with boats of all sizes. From downtown, a short distance inland, make your way toward the water down the narrow, flower-dotted streets. The first glimpse of blue sea and sky is breathtaking. Provincetown Cape Cod, MA: But Provincetown is a place for everyone who enjoys savory food, fun shopping, and fascinating people-watching. With grand 19th-century homes and cobblestone streets, it looks as though the whalers just left. Traveling to the island of Nantucket is like taking a trip to a parallel universe; you get historic charm but with 21st-century amenities. The island also has shops full of luxury goods, loads of historical sites open to the public, and miles of public beaches and bike paths. This island harbor town is full of fun for kids and parents. Norman Rockwell made a famous painting of the main street of this, his adopted hometown. Facing south, it uses the southern Berkshires as backdrop for the sprawl of the Red Lion Inn and the other late-19th-century buildings that make up the commercial district. Then as now, they service a beguiling mix of unassuming saltboxes and Gilded Age mansions that have sheltered farmers, artists, and aristocrats since the days of the French and Indian Wars. A classic, with a Congregational church facing a village green surrounded by clapboard Colonial houses -- all of them with black shutters. A walk past white-clapboard houses to the active waterfront on this narrow, unspoiled stretch of the Connecticut River rings all the right bells. There is not an artificial note, a cookie-cutter franchise, nor a costumed docent to muddy its near-perfect image. Rides on a steam locomotive or Mississippi-style riverboat are options. Woodstock has a stunning village green, a whole range of 19th-century homes, woodland walks leading just out of town, and a settled, old-money air. This is a good place to explore on foot or by bike, or to just sit and watch summer unfold. This is the way all state capitals should be: Montpelier also shows a more sophisticated edge, with its Culinary Institute, an art-house movie theater, and several fine bookshops.
