Northeastern University expects all applicants to submit an application essays, transcripts, test scores, etc. No part of the application can have been completed partially or completely, or significantly enhanced partially or completely, by persons including paid agents, admissions support agencies or personnel other than the student. The use of such services violates Northeastern University policy, and may lead to the rejection of application materials, the revocation of an admissions offer, cancellation of admission, or involuntary withdrawal from the university. International transfer students will need all of the transfer student required materials plus: Certified English translations of all transcripts by a recognized credentialing agency. For transfer applicants who have earned credits at an international institution, transcripts should be evaluated by the Center for Educational Documentation. The Certification of Finances is designed to assist colleges and universities in obtaining complete and accurate information about the funds available to international applicants. As Northeastern is unable to offer state or federally-funded financial support to international applicants, the process of verifying the financial resources of students is essential. Transfer credit policies and course equivalencies listed here. Additional Required Materials Special Documents Homeschool Applicants At Northeastern, we understand that homeschool applicants come from a variety of academic backgrounds and structures, and carefully consider every element of the application through our holistic review. In order to best consider our homeschool applicants, we require additional documents that provide an in-depth look at your individual homeschool experience. Please see a list of these additional requirements below. Academic portfolio and transcript consistent with state guidelines Please provide grading rubric alongside transcript Standardized Tests: Two SAT subject tests are recommended, but not required If you are a homeschooled applicant studying outside of the United States and thus are not required to submit SAT scores , you may provide results from AP exams, IB exams predicted or final , A-Levels, or another regionally or nationally accredited examination. Guidance Counselor and Teacher Recommendations: Your counselor recommendation may come from a parent or a primary instructor Teacher recommendations may come from a tutor, online teacher, or teacher from a course taken outside the home. We are flexible based on the structure of your homeschool experience An additional letter of recommendation is recommended, but not required. Additional recommendations can come from an art teacher, an employer, a coach, etc. If you have specific questions regarding the application process as a homeschooled student, please direct them to Assistant Directors of Admissions Ali Rogers a. Arts supplement materials must be submitted by the relevant application deadline of the admission plan you have chosen: The arts materials you submit to Amherst through SlideRoom will be considered as a supplement to the standard application materials for admission to Amherst College as a whole. Any student attending Amherst College may participate in the arts either as a departmental major or as a non-major taking courses through the curriculum or by engagement in extra-curricular activities whether or not the student previously submitted an arts supplement at the time of application. Students who have applied to Amherst by submitting the Coalition Application should select the appropriate arts supplement from the "Coalition Application Applicants" list. Students who have applied to Amherst by submitting the Common Application should select the appropriate arts supplement from the "Common Application Applicants" list. Please note that the content and requirements of all three categories of arts supplements are the same; they differ only in the technical processing of arts recommendations for students submitting different types of admission applications. Recommendations should be submitted directly by the teacher through the SlideRoom online reference system. To initiate that process, you should use the "Add Reference" option available in your SlideRoom online supplement. If your art recommender is unable to use the SlideRoom system, arts recommendations may be sent directly by the teacher via email to admission@amherst.edu. You must submit your arts supplement by the appropriate application deadline: SlideRoom does not permanently download embedded media, so if you remove the original content or otherwise restrict access to the linked material, it will not be retrievable in SlideRoom by Amherst faculty reviewers. You can also email SlideRoom directly at support@slideroom.com. At Yale, they get over 10, music supplements, and they are not going to listen to all 10, in their entirety. Keep in mind, Yale does not have a time limit on their art supplement website (they don't use the common app arts supplement).

While we request that the volume of supplementary credentials be kept to a minimum, there may be occasions where such credentials provide valuable information that the standard application does not. Please note that supplements are not a required part of our admissions process. We specifically ask that you do not send collections of awards or certificates, and we explicitly direct that you refrain from submitting or mailing any type of supplementary materials in binders or folders. If you feel it is necessary to provide additional information, you may submit a PDF of your resume as part of the Columbia-specific questions in either the Common Application or the Coalition Application, where we allow for the submission of professional resumes. Should you wish to share samples of your work that may be viewed online, clearly indicate the relevant links in the additional information section of your admission application. Finally, please be advised that while we welcome the submission of such credentials, we can provide no guarantee that all materials will be reviewed or evaluated, as they are not required for the admission process. Early Decision applicants must submit their supplements by November 1 and Regular Decision applicants must submit their supplements by January 1.

Science, Engineering and Other Academic Research If you have completed research with a faculty member or mentor in science, engineering or other academic disciplines e. You may upload your abstract in the Columbia-specific questions to the Common Application or in the Uploads page of the Coalition Application. If you are submitting an abstract, you will also be asked to answer a few short questions on the duration of your research involvement, your specific role in and contributions to the research project, and contact information of your research mentor. This will help us better understand your specific research experience beyond what you may have already included in your other application materials. Most students who choose to submit an artistic portfolio have achievements at the state, national or international level related to their craft and have devoted a significant amount of time and energy to their art forms. Arts supplements are entirely optional and not required for the admissions process. Architecture, Creative Writing, Dance, Drama and Theatre Arts, Film, Music and Visual Arts supplements can be submitted through SlideRoom, an online platform that allows applicants to send digital materials to the admissions office. SlideRoom can be accessed through your Columbia application. If you are applying using a QuestBridge Application, you will indicate your intention to submit an arts supplement as part of your Columbia QuestBridge Questionnaire. Each SlideRoom submission incurs a fee, listed in each program below. SlideRoom fee waivers are automatically provided for all applicants receiving a Common Application fee waiver through the Common Application system. Architecture Digital images will be accepted as. Students submitting an architecture supplement should select up to 10 digital images or models that highlight the best work in their portfolio. Please do not submit journalism samples or full books. Dance A video of dance accomplishments must be no more than MB and between four and six minutes in length. A video, no more than 15 minutes in total length highlighting film work from one or multiple productions. Music We ask that students select two works contrasting in period and tempo, and choose from one of three possible types of submissions: We require that students also list the composer, title of the work and movement title or opus number. The total length of recordings should not exceed 20 minutes and should not include any biographical or introductory material. Recordings should be as clear as possible. Students will have the opportunity to indicate the time ranges for any highlighted portions of their recordings. Audio materials will be accepted as. Composition scores may be submitted as. Students are asked to limit themselves to one music supplement. If they have significant talent in more than one area within music performance or composition they are asked to select their primary area of focus as their supplement. Visual Arts Digital images will be accepted as. Students submitting a visual arts supplement should select up to 20 digital images that highlight the best work in their portfolio.
