

Chapter 1 : Nannying vs Babysitting - Know the Difference - Nanny Jenni

If you answered yes to any of these questions, then you might have done some babysitting. Written by an experienced childcare professional, this book covers everything from the games to the goobers. You will learn all you need to know to be the best babysitter in town.

Jenni Nannying vs babysitting “ have you ever wondered what the difference was between them? Quite a lot of people often get the two mixed up. Only around 3 or 4 years ago I learnt that nannies actually existed and there are people like Mary Poppins and Nanny Mcphee out there. Nannying vs Babysitting Babysitting usually occurs a few hours in an evening. Babysitters do not have to have any childcare qualifications, maintain a first aid certificate or a DBS check and can sometimes be young workers. For my first babysitting family I cared for a 6 month old baby and a 4 year old. When I turned up and the children were usually asleep and I spent my evening sitting eating snacks and watching a bit of television. Babysitters often turn up to care for children during an evening while the parents go out. The children are often asleep on arrival. Nannying Nannying is a job, a career. Nannies are expected to have childcare qualifications, first aid training and have a clean DBS check. Sometimes nannies are expected to be Ofsted registered too. Nannies are expected to care for children all day while their parents go to work. Nannies are a big support system for the family. We cook, clean, do the washing, ironing and dog walking. On top of that we plan activities, teach and encourage the children in our care to thrive, be entertained and be happy. We help with homework, school projects and run errands such as collecting parcels and grocery shopping. We do the bedtime routine, we bathe and put the children to bed. Nannies are employed by the parents. We get a monthly pay check, we pay taxes and National Insurance. We are professionals who run a house while the parents are at work, we work as part of a team to help raise tiny human beings.

These rules are based on 15 years of both personal experience as well as thousands of questions and responses on our Park Slope Parents Advice group. You can add to most of these rules the clause "unless you agree on something different before hiring. Have a written work agreement. The work agreement you have with your nanny will list pay, vacation, exact holidays, sick days, and other important things that will come up in the future that may be unforeseeable or even impossible now. This is a complex, time-consuming process if you are starting from scratch. While it feels easy to "go with your gut," which we do recommend you trust! Know what type of working situation you are offering. Will you be working from home? Are you planning on having more kids down the line? Knowing what you are offering will allow you to find the right fit and set appropriate expectations. Remember that the overwhelming majority of nannies are good, honest people. However, do your homework. Know who YOU are so you can hire the right nanny for your family. If you prefer to have lots of control, make sure you hire a person who can handle that level of micro-management. Need the nanny to be proactive or reactive? No matter how much you and they feel they are "part of the family," knowing yourself is important in making the right choice for a nanny. Realize that having a nanny can be an emotional experience like no other. While it is an incredible relief to have someone help you take care of your children, it can also stir up a lot of feelings about what you want to provide for your family. This unique relationship will hopefully grow stronger over time but keeping your feelings in check and communicating is integral to the process. It is hard to trust what seems like a complete stranger with our children. Your children are going to be exposed to a lot of strangers in their lifetimes doctors, teachers, other parents, so it is a gift for a child to be able to develop a loving relationship with someone outside the family early on. It is also a gift to you. Think of what peace of mind you will have if you are able to talk with and understand and trust the sitter, thus knowing your child is in good hands from the start. One in three started looking two weeks to month ahead of time. However, there are always good candidates available. What can you expect work-wise? The easy answer is anything you negotiate and pay for. Here are some questions to ask yourself regarding what you need. Do you want someone who will run errands dry cleaning, shopping for food, etc. Do you want someone who will manage other people who may come to your house. Do you want someone who will care for or deal with pets? Does your child need extra discipline or extra affection? Is your child mellow or high energy? Do you want someone who will follow your precise plans every day or someone who will develop her own daily routines? Do you want someone who checks in frequently or who is more independent? Do you need someone who can handle assistance with homework? Do you have any special religious considerations, such as a caregiver who will keep your family kosher? Do you want someone who only does baby-related housework or additional housework around the home? Create a precise list of the tasks, both daily and weekly, and put that in the Work Agreement which we will discuss later.

To download a babysitter emergency information sheet visit our Nanny and Babysitter Ressource Page Keep this info in the kitchen on a fridge or a noticeable location While you will hopefully not need to use any of this information, it is important to know it all, as in an emergency you will not want to worry about trying to get a hold of the parents to find out. Get Feeding Information Is the child breast or bottle fed? Sometimes newborns that are breastfed have difficulty taking anything from a bottle. Before you care for the infant for the first time ensure that bottle feeding is possible. Also, ask about how to heat up the bottle - bottle warmer or microwave. Find out from the parents the best way to burp. You should also ask about their feeding schedule, as you may need to feed them more than once. Are there any cues that the child shows that indicate they are hungry? Or do the parents feed them at set intervals every two hours, etc. Try Everything to Comfort Them Newborns usually cry when they want something. Is there diaper soiled, are they hungry, or do they want a soother? Are they cold or too hot? Is there noise or light that is bothering them? Or do they just want to be held? Naps are Vital Newborns need a lot of sleep and will need to take many naps throughout the day. Try not to over-stimulate the baby before a nap. This can make it more challenging to get them to go down. When putting them in the crib, make sure the baby is on their back, and there are no small objects are in the crib. If they are on a sleep schedule, try to stick to the routine. Watch out for Pets Pets are often curious and sometimes jealous of a newborn. Make sure pets cannot enter the bedroom while a newborn is sleeping. Make sure a pet is not at your feet while you are walking with a baby and keep a close eye on them to ensure they are not up to something sneaky while you are preoccupied with the baby. Activities and Engagement Newborns love everything to do with voices- talking, singing, babbling and gentle cooing. Newborns also respond well to music. Some like gentle music and some like a bit stronger beat. Another thing newborns love are mobiles and rattles. Keep in mind that newborn infants can be sensitive and startle with bright light and sudden or loud sounds. This is partially due to the fact that they have not yet been vaccinated to help their bodies fight off disease. Their bodies are also using a large amount of their energy to grow and develop their immune system. During this time, they are very susceptible to illness, and even something as simple as the common cold can cause a newborn to become quite ill. If you are going to be caring for a newborn, make sure that you are in good health. Remember that you are most contagious a few days before you are actually fully ill, so even slight symptoms should be noted. Be an Extra Pair of Hand Parents of newborns are often tired and stressed. It is a wonderful gesture for you as a babysitter to do a few extra things while the baby is sleep. Even simple things such as doing dishes, folding laundry, and cleaning up toys, can be a great help to parents. Communication is Key When things are not going well, it is a good idea to text mom and let her know that the baby is not happy, sick, or just does not seem to be themselves. Informing the parents during the day provides them with the opportunity to provide suggestions to you or come home early. Even when things are going well, it can be stressful for parents to leave their newborns. Providing them with how the day went sometimes is enough to ease their minds and appreciate that you are an experienced babysitter that knows how to care for their child. In fact, they may call several times to check in on you. Try to remember that they have chosen you to watch their child for a good reason, and their checking in has nothing to do with you personally or your abilities as a caregiver. It has everything to do with their concerns for their child. Hopefully, these tips and suggestions will help you to feel more confident when you are caring for a newborn. Chapter 4 : Babysitter in Reading, Nanny in Reading - Jen Tyle - www.nxgvision.com

A nanny or manny (male nanny) is a person usually with special training who is employed to care for children in the child's household. Nannies are expected to have childcare qualifications, first aid training and have a clean DBS check.

I have looked after children from Newborn upwards. Jobs included creating a range of fun activities for the children to participate in, preparing meals, ensuring household tasks were completed, ensuring a safe environment was obtained at all times. Generally, I am a young, loving and caring person. I am very keen on cooking healthy, balanced meals from scratch when possible. I am a fun, reliable and easy going person with a can-do approach. I am very understanding and would be more than capable of taking care of the babies in a loving and respectful manner. I am always very flexible for my employers. I look forward to hearing from you very soon!!! However, their personal circumstances have unfortunately changed, and no longer require a Nanny. I am therefore looking for a new, Full Time, Permanent position. Beaconsfield, Marlow, Maidenhead, Cookham etc areas. I am doing this until I find a lovely family to join on a permanent FT basis. This was a temporary position until the mum took redundancy within her job. This was a Full Time, live in, sole charge role with some proxy parenting when the parents were away some weekends, either with work or weddings etc. It involved long hours, extra babysitting in the evenings and overtime, often at very short notice involving a lot of flexibility. Its had me going away with them at times too. If need be I also ran errands, getting bits of shopping in too. I bathed the children and put them to bed every evening. This role is sadly came to an end due to a financial situation with the family. This requires a lot of flexibility as times would change regularly and very last minute. This role involved me keeping the household together, doing homework with the children, keeping them entertained, cooking, general household chores and washing, taking the children to after school activities such as swimming, trampolining etc. The role was originally only suppose to be for 3 weeks over Christmas, but they asked me to stay longer due to the mum needing further treatments. The position ended up lasting 5 months which is when I left to start the new Full Time permanent position. The mother was in the very late stages of her pregnancy, expecting Twins. A set of Twin Girls, aged 2 from 1 year old and a 7 year old Girl from 6 years old. This involved me taking the 7 year old to and from school every day, and then organising and entertaining play dates, after school activities etc. With the Twins, I took them to activity groups, took them to the park, gymnastics classes, created stimulating activities at home, such as arts and crafts, baking as well as play dates etc. Sometimes, depending on whether the parents were running late home or not, I gave the children their bath and sometimes put them to bed. I took her out on day trips, helped with housekeeping etc. This then ended when the family moved back to Ireland to live. I did this one day a week alongside another role. I provided care, games, activities and meals for the child. Went out on day trips etc whilst ensuring it was stimulating and fun at the same time. Also, I have recieved my CSLA award Community sports leadership award this involved me coaching children in different sporting activities. I have a first aid at work certificate. I am also events first aid trained. Please feel free to message me with enquiries.

2 - Agency: Various nanny agencies offer a service that will send a pre-screened babysitter to your home based on your preferences and required hours. 3 - Neighborhood: If you don't need a professional babysitter, but just want someone to play with and provide basic care for your child, looking in your own neighborhood is an option.

Jenni If you have a nanny and struggle for gift ideas then I have a little guide to help you! Nobody says you have to get your nanny a gift for their birthday or for Christmas but if you want to then just take a look below. Nanny gift guide Homemade card or gift from your children! Something sentimental is my favourite gift to receive. I love a written card appreciating all my hard work too! A gift experience voucher. For example, a spa day. This Christmas just gone one of my nanny families the one I have been at for two years got me a locket that was engraved. Myself for one would LOVE that. My new nanny family children that I started with in January went undercover asking me questions to get ideas for my birthday! I had no idea. I thought they were just getting to know me. My other family also got me socks for Christmas " I always wear socks with various pictures on " mainly cats and dinosaurs. Vouchers " if your going for vouchers unless you know you nanny well and know what she likes I would recommend getting an all in one voucher so she has options where to spend it. I have kept every card I have ever received from my nanny children. Even children I have looked after over the years in nurseries. A paid day off " perhaps her birthday! The majority of nannies said they would prefer a thoughtful gift. This could be something that shows you know them well or something homemade! If you are a nanny reading this comment below if you have any other suggestions!

Chapter 6 : Babysitters in Simcoe N3Y: they're available!

Nanny vs. Babysitter What is the difference between a nanny and a babysitter? Although nannies and babysitters both provide quality childcare, there are some basic differences between the two.

Here are some considerations that affect the babysitting pay rate. Teens and younger aged babysitters tend to have a lower babysitting pay rate as well. Major metropolitan areas tend to command the highest pay rate. The babysitting pay rate may be higher in cases where a babysitter has more years of experience, is caring for more than one of your children, and has specialized training such as CPR certification or early childhood education. Babysitters who have a greater degree of responsibility, such as driving your children or teaching them a specific skill can command higher rates as well. You need to find a childcare provider for your little one, but you have to do so from afar. Always find out what type of prescreening or requirements the hotel has in place for babysitters on their recommended list. Do some research to find out what babysitter agencies are available in the area. Here, you can also be thorough and find out what sort of prescreening measures are in place for individual childcare professionals. Use word of mouth. Use an online database, such as NannyLane. Five Questions You Should Ask At A Babysitter Interview If you have a number of potential candidates lined up for a babysitter interview, you could be on your way to hiring someone qualified to look after your child. Ask what experience your babysitter has had and whether she has any experience with a child in the same age group as yours. Ask for references that include past babysitting jobs that an applicant has had. Find out if your babysitter has had any CPR training and is familiar with what to do in case of an emergency involving your child. Ask what type of philosophy your babysitter has in taking care of children. Four Places To Find A Babysitter Sometimes, figuring out where to find a babysitter to look after your children can be a challenge. Going online is one of the easiest ways to conduct your search for a babysitter. Various nanny agencies offer a service that will send a pre-screened babysitter to your home based on your preferences and required hours. Responsible teens looking for part-time work may be interested in babysitting for you. Let your friends and family know you are trying to find a babysitter and would like to see if they can refer you to someone. Finding a babysitter through someone you know can be a good starting point for childcare. However, keep in mind that the maturity level of each individual young person is different. Other experts feel a teenager who is at least 14 years of age makes a better choice for a babysitter. Other parents may feel more comfortable with an adult babysitter. Regardless of age, the best thing to do is take the time to talk to a potential babysitter hire, get to know her personality and maturity level, and ask for and check references. Having a checklist of what to do and what not to do will help you in your search. Here are three tips about how to find a babysitter. When finding a babysitter, give yourself ample time to conduct your search. Think for the long-term. Having a reliable babysitter you can trust can save you the hassle of repeating your search every time you need someone. When it comes to finding a babysitter, this means asking for references, doing an interview, and seeing how the babysitter interacts with your child or children. Not only can a nanny cam provide footage of how your children and the nanny behave when you are out, it can also be used as a deterrent against bad babysitting behavior. With the prevalence of these devices, no babysitter knows whether he or she is being recorded or not, so it's less likely your nanny will be tempted to give in to frustration.
