Chapter 1 : North Sea Passage Pilot - North West Europe - Imray

North Sea Passage Pilot: The East Coast of England from Yarmouth to Dover, the Continental Coast from Calais to Den Helder and North Sea Passages avg rating 4.5 out of 5 stars published Want to Read saving.

Coast-hopping along the Belgian and Dutch coasts, you will not be bothered by wind farms, Much will depend on the length of the trips you want to make. As far as the Frisian islands, all can be divided into easy daysails, from the Frisian Islands to the Kiel Canal is best done in one go, about 36 hours, so not too bad johnalison , This misses the wind farms and can be done as day sails, almost. There is plenty to see and do in the Frisians, but you would probably want to save this for your return, when adverse winds are more likely. You will encounter ferries from Dover to Calais and Dover to Dunkirk along with all the other traffic. Preferred route Cross most of the ferry traffic at the eastern entrance to Dover port i. Check your chart for wrecks outside Dunkirk east. As usual pick a favourable tide keep a good lookout, you could do the trip in 6 hours. Crossing over to France before Dunkirk means following up the channels which you could do without if you want to get some miles under the keel. So long as you are sensible the traffic is not such a big issue, especially with radar and AIS to fall back on if the visibility deteriorates. Owner only wanted day hops so did: Some long days but doable with two of us clogging along in a boat that size. Nav was straightforward up the channels between the banks using a plotter. I would be prepared to keep an open mind until I had to decide, say, at Dover. Coming from the East Coast, I have done most of the proposed trip a number of times, including non-stop three times. You have to buck the tide some of the way whatever you do, but all that matters is arriving at the mouth of the Elbe at the change of tide. This is remarkably undifficult but a lot of people seem to get it wrong and end up against a 4 knot current. You can take a break fairly easily at Norderney, or even Helgoland, though you will need to keep clear of a traffic rotary scheme nearby or face stiff penalties. It looks as though the plan to break at Dover is a good one. Subject to weather, I am inclined to then aim for a non-stop run to Dan Helder and then on to Norderney. A good distraction from the snow outside! Leave the Solent at low water, through the Looe chanel The node point is somewhere between Sovereign and Dungeness If you are not going to carry it in one go you can stop at Eastbourn.. Calais has limited access.. Dunkirque full access The Ziderkirke channel between France and Belgium, very close to shore is well buoyed Because there is a lot of commercial traffic the entire coast is very well buoyed.. The approach to the Keeil Canal is very well marked with huge posts.. However it can be an awful bit of water is itnis running a South easterly or North Westerly.. The lock to the canal at Bruinhaven is easy Intakes a day to transit the canall and is very boring.. You are not allowed to move after dark Pay dues at the lock at Keil.. Enjoy BelleSerene , Beware always of shifted sands since the pilot was published; I know of one in the Thames Estuary since all my charts were published. The coast hopping route I did in http:
