Teaser They can run From the inside, a woman - Colette - is seen gathering books in a rather hurriedly manner. Three guards enter her personal library, one of which alerts her that the wall has fallen and that they must leave now, for the town will soon be overrun. The guard pleads for her to come, but the woman does not listen. Instead she orders that they take the trunks containing books to the carriage and she will be right behind them. The lead guard motions for the other two to do as the lady says. He then asks what about her daughter. Colette calls out for her daughter, telling her that they must leave, quickly, and asks where she is. Belle rushes into the library, exclaiming that she is right here. Colette is touched by this, but tells her that they must flee, quickly. However, before they can, they hear loud stomps as the castle shakes. This scares the mother and daughter, who both realize what it is. Sometime later, Belle and Colette are seen hiding in the library, underneath a table, hoping that they will not be found by what is roaming the castle. Belle is horrified, but Colette motions for her to keep quiet. Belle nods, trying to stay calm. The mother and daughter watch as the ogre roams around the library. As it appears to be walking away, Colette whispers to Belle that everything will be alright. Wakey, wakey, eggs and bakey. Suddenly, Belle wakes up in her bed. She immediately sits up, calling out, " Mother? Belle is next seen making her way through the castle, still dressed in her night gown and having not fixed up her hair. She is confused to see a group of people gathered around something, discussing amongst themselves. He asks why she is not in bed, but is not answered. Belle cannot believe what she sees. She hugs her father tightly, and looks as if she is about to break down into tears. In the back of the safe, the real dagger is seen. The Dark One quickly closes the safe and puts the wall painting back over it. He greets his beloved wife, who finds him in the back of the shop. Henry notices ice cream trucks. How the hell did she do it? Everyone is surprised; "Whoa, Snow Queen has an ice cream truck? Hook, Regina, and Emma, you take the west. Maybe I can dig something up on the Snow Queen. Belle argues with her father. In the fairytale land that was, Belle sits in her candlelit chambers, reading. Maurice apologizes, but says he already lost Colette to this infernal ogres war and he cannot lose her too. He then storms out, closing the door behind him. Belle sits silently for a moment, but finally removes a map of Arendelle from underneath her book. In Arendelle of the past, Elsa is seen magically poofing up a snowflake; she appears to be trying to control her powers. Elsa apologizes for making her feel like she had to, "I know you did it for me to try to make me feel better. Usually a conversation about our parents ends with a chill in the air. Anna turns around, and in walks the Snow Queen. Anna is surprised and confused. The Snow Queen introduces herself as Ingrid, telling Anna that she and her mother are sisters, "You look exactly like her," the woman exclaims. Ingrid shows what she means by poofing up a snowflake, letting it spin, and then making it disappear, "Our gift runs in the family," the Snow Queen says, with a smile on her face. An [insert ship name here] kiss. What makes you think that? Kristoff reminds her that she agreed to marry Hans ten minutes after talking to him, to which Anna argues she was young and naive. Anna says they need to wonder, is Ingrid really her aunt, or is she some impostor trying to warm her way into her family? There has to be an explanation for all of this. She says that telling her their parents wanted to take away her magic, she just needed to find the right moment. Kristoff smiles, and the couple kiss; Anna then leaves him alone. In present day Storybrooke , the Snow Queen is seen in the forest where her ice cream truck is kept. She appears to be walking away from it with a devious expression on her face. Meanwhile, on the other side of the vehicle, Merry Men stand from a distance, aiming their bow and arrows at it. Emma , followed by Hook and Regina , join them. As Emma, Hook, and Regina head for the truck, Robin Hood stops the latter, hoping that he and his true love could talk.

Once upon a Time, in Business. by Michael Graber. In business and daily life, we are wired for stories as a species. One creation myth begins by saying God.

The daughter is Belle , who was trying to retrieve her book, but as they attempt to flee, it is too late, as they are forced to hide under a table in their library. Unfortunately, an ogre finds them and attacks. The event turns out to be a nightmare for Belle, who wakes up and asks her father about what happened as she cannot remember. Unfortunately, after posting a "Sorry" letter to her father, Belle looks at a map and says she needs answers, and that it can be found in a place called Arendelle. Meanwhile, in Arendelle, Anna shows up back home and Elsa asks what she found out about their parents, but Anna lies and says she found nothing. Elsa then introduces the Snow Queen to Anna as their aunt Ingrid , but Anna says their mother never mentioned having a sister. Unconvinced, Anna tells Kristoff that she does not trust the Snow Queen, since there is no trace of her within the family portrait gallery or royal records, despite being reassured by Kristoff, who is still upset over postponing the wedding. Unknown to Anna, Ingrid has been eavesdropping on the conversation. Overhearing this, Anna asks if she needs help and tells Belle that she come along with her, then they head out. Belle says she lost her memory and wants the rock trolls to restore her memory so she can be at peace. Anna brings Belle to meet Grand Pabbie, who can restore her memories. Then, he gives her a stone, and tells her to it put in tea and drink it at the place where she lost her memories to get them back. Belle thanks Anna for her help and offers to repay her. Grand Pabbie then tells Anna that her mother, Gerda , had not one, but two sisters, Helga and Ingrid, as he was sworn to secrecy. He says that the three were close as children, but one day, the other two children vanished, and they wanted to forget the tragedy, so he helped them by wiping their memories of all in Arendelle. The stone then tumbles and smashes, and Belle grabs for Anna, but she loses her to the rocks at the base of the cliff. Ingrid then shows up and takes the magic box from her bag. Belle later returns home, where her father awaits her. He tells Belle what happened to her mother, in which she sacrificed her life to save Belle. Anna denies this, but at the same time, she becomes suspicious as to why Ingrid never mentioned anything about Helga, so which Ingrid simply replies that some secrets are best kept buried. Ingrid, seeing Anna as a distraction, was hoping that she would a be part of a family with her and Elsa. Instead, Ingrid claims that after observing her, she realized that her idea of including all 3 of them in her family would never work out, and that it was time to replace Anna. In Storybrooke Belle tells Mr. Emma believes that Ingrid might have erased their memories of her six months that she was in her care. David suggests that they all split up and search for Ingrid, with Henry giving them a clue as to where to find her: When Emma opens it, she finds a file that Ingrid has kept of Emma since her arrival in the real world, along with her artwork. She also discovers a scroll that contains cryptic readings. Gold locates Ingrid and calls her out. Ingrid, knowing how well Gold works, tells him that she wanted Emma to find out about their past as part of her plan. Gold to stay out of her way. After they find it, Belle orders Gold to stay outside while she goes in, but there is no sign of the Snow Queen anywhere. Belle then hears a voice, which draws her to a mirror, where an image of Belle taunts her for not saving Anna, and reveals the truth about her husband, including the revelation that the dagger she has is a fake. Belle has been exposed to the mirror, meaning that Ingrid had threatened Belle, someone who was close to him. Elsa says she thinks Ingrid believes the prophecy and is looking to replace her sisters.

We are not generally retelling the exact same story as the fairy tale world. Kitsis and Horowitz have called him a "godfather" to the series. Kitsis and Horowitz sought to write strong female characters, rather than the classic damsel in distress. Horowitz stated their desire to approach each character the same way, asking themselves, "How do we make these icons real, make them relatable?" Horowitz elaborated, "One of the fun things for us coming up with these stories is thinking of ways these different characters can interact in ways they never have before. After Fables fans raised controversy over possible appropriation, the show writers initially denied a link, but later said they may have "read a couple issues" of the comic book but while the two concepts are "in the same playground", they are "telling a different story. Secondary character casting director, Samuel Forsyth, started the casting process in Horowitz stated that everyone they initially wanted for roles in the series accepted their roles after being sent a script. Goodwin had stated in interviews that she would love to play Snow White, and called her acceptance of the role "a no-brainer. He explained, "Prince Charming just happens to be a name. He gets his hands dirty. He has a family to protect. He has an epic, epic love for Snow White. Gold was given to Robert Carlyle , [56] after having been written with him in mind, though the writers initially thought he would not accept the part. You could see Ginny actually jump, the first time he did that character. Along with departures, Andrew J. They will portray an older Henry Mills and his daughter Lucy respectively. In July , actresses Dania Ramirez and Gabrielle Anwar were announced to be joining the cast of the seventh season as series regulars, playing new iterations of Cinderella and Lady Tremaine , respectively. In September , Mekia Cox , who portrays Tiana , was promoted to a series regular. During filming, all brightly colored objects flowers, etc. Certain sets are additionally filmed in separate studios, including the interior of Mr. Please help improve this article by adding citations to reliable sources. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed. July Main settings[edit] During the first six seasons, the Enchanted Forest and Storybrooke, Maine are the main settings of the series. The Enchanted Forest is a realm within Fairy Tale Land, but the actual spread and scope of the realm is not known. However, they are later united during the Ogre Wars, which played a part in the formation of the War Council that is formed by Prince Charming and served as the catalysts in the backstories involving Rumpelstiltskin and the Evil Queen. Several independent kingdoms are implied by an array of different rulers. Most of the stories detailed their earlier lives before ascension to power and being influenced by their mentors through their upbringings. Meanwhile, Storybrooke serves as an isolated town separated from the rest of the Land Without Magic, where the cursed inhabitants are trapped by various forces. During the seventh season, the New Enchanted Forest [15] is shown as the main setting, alongside with Hyperion Heights, Seattle. The inhabitants are in-conflict with each other, most notably between Lady Tremaine, Cinderella, Drizella, a resistance led by Tiana, and the Coven of the Eight led by Mother Gothel. Most flashbacks shown are involving events happened before the original curse and before the latest curse that brought everyone to Hyperion Heights, where unlike Storybrooke, its cursed inhabitants are living among ordinary people.

The woodlands location is a complete rip off! I issued my problems with corporate office I literally got the same exact answer each time like it was a computer not a person Oct. Therefore, the military discounts will basically be down to nothing! I am going to start shopping at other stores where my Military Service is Valued! We walk in with our stuff and we signed in, at 6: The girl that was looking at the stuff was training, and was actually super nice. I asked her how long it would take for the 3 items that we brought in and she said about 10 minutes and asked that we do not leave the store, which was completely fine. However the entire time another girl that was there with a clip board asking her questions while she was looking at the stuff. Needless to say they wasted 40 minutes of my life that I can never get back! I wish they would have just said no from the beginning! I was a pretty loyal customer and actually used to refer lots of people to this store, but not anymore Considering that the U. This is was very nasty and unclean. Things where everywhere and all over the place. I was never greeted when I walked through the door. I stood there for about ten minutes before anyone said anything to me. Then she proceeded to let me know, in a very dry voice that, they would not be excepting my little girls beautiful clean clothes on hangers. She let me know it had to be in a basket. Thank the Lord that there was one in the trunk of my car. It took time to take the clothes off the hangers and placed them nicely in the basket. She came over and was like "did you fill out the form" I said no, and filled it out. She filled out her paper handed it to me and throw my things over with the other pile of things that where everywhere behind the counter. I figured because it was back to school, maybe they where not crowded the most times. Took my paper and left. Then I get a phone call today from Jan the Asst. Manager to let me know that my clothes smell and to go back home and wash them, and they would look over them again. I did wash the clothes, I did iron the clothes, I did put them on hangers. I did everything I was supposed to do. When I told her all of this, she hung up in my face. This problem needs to be fixed ASAP!!!! I had a huge tote and several plastic bags full of my twin daughters outgrown clothes. There was no room directly in front of the store so I parked in a spot far away. Next to my car was a cart from the neighboring grocery store so I grabbed it and put all my stuff in it and walked in the door. Immediately I had a snotty employee run over and tell me I needed to get the cart out asap. I explained that I only used it to get all the clothes inside and I had no intention of keeping it in the store. I got dirty looks from the other employees as I unloaded everything and quickly got the cart outside. I could hear them talking loudly about me and laughing in front of other customers. Why would you bring a cart in? I started to explain that there was no room at the time I came in, but then I just walked away instead of starting a scene. They were obviously annoyed that I had so many non-brand items bc they kept doing an annoyed sigh with each piece of clothing they looked at. Near the end they came across another walmart dress and through it on the floor. I will never buy nor sell there again. This last time is the last time! I would rather give my clothes to goodwill and not get any money than put up with the awful customer service for a few bucks! I dropped off clothes one hour ago and she told me it would be done in an hour. At this time there were 6 people working all girls. I dont see how u can sort clothes and price them properly when I am talking laughing and sinking beverages at the same time! I have two kids one I have to lug around in a car seat. And if u have kids u know how heavy they can be and annoying to get in and out of the car. I left and came back in an hour to see if they were done to of course not get acknowledged again and they of course were not done! So she was like we said we would call u! And I was like okay well when might that be then? And she said well there are two people in front of u so an hour and a half ,like I said! I was like what!? Well it has been an hour and an hour layer now an hour and a half? I could give many stories! How do I get the corporate office number? If you dont like it keep it to yourself. No one wants to hear you. I really had to pick through to find anything I would put on my kids. There are no dressing rooms. The one-person restroom was it. I walked my four kids up front to ask if we could please change somewhere else due to the nasty, diarrhea-contaminated bathroom. I asked if we could use the hallway inside the back room door located in front of the restroom. Very embarrassing for my sweet 9yo. The young girl, Ashley so she said--neither girl wore a nametag , got a management position how? Both my husband of We are done with OUAC! I slathered my kids in hand sanitizer when we got to our van, I kid you not. What a disgusting experience all-around!!! It sickens me that we gave that horrid place any business at all. They were either hardly used, or brand new some with tags and some without. I went back in at 2: I had to call them at 3: Then they were going to offer me This experience was insulting and hurtful. So the slight wrinkles the clothes have now is from them rummaging threw the bags to claim the looked it all over when I garentee you they did not. The staff was rude and unprofessional. I took my stuff back and will have a yard sale or eBay it. I had many items from Gap, and hardly anything was taken. Some of the stores only pick out brand names. I was told some were too worn and they might of been worn times yet what I found hanging for purchase were in dire condition. Most of the employees seem to be young girls and are somewhat rude both at Maple Grove and Minnetonka store. To be honest they kept what I thought they would return and returned all the name brand clothes. I am not sure the employees of that particular store knew childrens clothing or any items associated with a child. Regardless that the cigarette was not lit, it is still a location where parents bring in their children. As I stood there I watched the employee walk out of the store, light up her cigarette and have a seat on the side walk and go about her business, when I asked her if that was an appropriate location to smoke she told me that she was outside and that was good enough. I am thinking that something like this should be taken very seriously, and rules of not smoking on the property should be enforced. Donate clothes to a shelter rather than get paid pennies from this place. Everyone has to make money but the stuff they have for sale is over priced and they offer next to nothing on the stuff they buy. The lady waiting on me was very rude upon greeting me as well as not explaining the procedures. In looking around the store the inventory was that of a Salvation Army Thrift store with retail prices. I will not be returning to this store and will not recommend it to anyone. I know each store is a franchise, but Once Upon A Child Corporate Offices should look into this store, as they are giving the company a bad name. On one more note, my daughter, manages a consignment store in Virginia and was appalled at what I told and described to her.
