The world as I know it - past, present, future. I figured it was a toad, something they both chase regularly. Between them, they had dumped over the basket of pecans sitting by the door, scattered yard shoes everywhere and shoved the cabinet catawampus next to the wall. So - I pulled it away from the wall so they could get to whatever it was before they destroyed everything on the porch. A really big rat that was trying to climb the wall to get away from them. And, what, you ask, did I do? Well, to be honest, my first action was to scream, jump back into the house, slam the door and lock the dog door shut. Anyway, back to the action on the back porch two RAT terriers charging a rat aaannndddd It got away from them. Zipped right past them both heading for the other side of the porch. Now, in a space of a couple of seconds, I was thinking This might be the best time to call for help - is there a "rat patrol" here in Wharton? What if it gets away? Ohmigod - what if it gets into the house? Dogs were hot on the heels do rats have heels do you think? During all this hullabaloo, our cat, Pyewacket was sitting on a table just watching. As the rat headed for the gate, Pye casually jumped down, snatched up the rat and hopped over the fence. As this point I gathered up my courage and went outside after Pye who was laying in the grass watching the rat. After a minute or so of watching, Pye jumped up and swatted the rat back into the yard. I told Pye to keep ahold of the rat and ran for the shovel. Nothing gets through the holly without serious injury.
