Paint Me Like I Am is a collection of poems by teens who have taken part in writing programs run by a national nonprofit organization called WritersCorps. To read the words of these young people is to hear the diverse voices of teenagers everywhere.

Nov 11, Tay Nov 11, I think this poem is about a girl who someone paints. I think that the girl the character wants the paintings of her to show happiness, not any other feelings. I say that because of the lines that say: Paint me without my sorrow. Paint me without my tears. Can you see the face telling you paint me happy, Paint me with life, but most of all Paint me free. I think the girl or boy wants to be painted like themselves I think they might really like who they are because if you paint someone different it looks like they have a different personality. I think the artist painted her with a frowny face because in the second to last stanza it is giving character a command maybe to someone. I think in the second stanza it is describing the person. I think the character is about a girl because it says long black hair but, I am not sure because some boys like their hair really long. In the last stanza it is saying smiles are free and life and the frown is not life and you are not free. Sonia Nov 12, Paint me sunflowers, red and white roses. Paint me with bears, rabbits and baby deer In my arms, dancing around me. Also I enjoyed this poem because it has happiness at one point and sadness at another and that is interesting. Mathew Nov 14, I say the person is really gloomy, because the poem says paint here happy and not sad, then it also says dont paint me the way I am so an antonym for joyful is miserable. Grace Nov 11, I think that the girl in this poem is sick of all the sorrow, pain, and sadness, and wants her painting to remind her of happier times. Alas, the artist is painting her the opposite of what she wants to be painted as. I think the girl is sick of being haunted of her painful memories.
