To find out how daringly difficult it is to deal with the alfalfa aficionado, The Boss has assigned a flunky to get the scoop from the happy hairball himself on what life is like in his cozy corral. So, Pedro, what would you say ya do here? I have mail skills! I also star in my very own comic strip in the back of this magazine each month. I see you have a new pair of pants. I have a new wrangler. His name is Stephen Gilpin. He keeps me stocked with purple sweaters and now Scout pants. And check out my new hairdo. My previous wrangler, Tom Eaton, has retired after a lot of years of putting up with me. The new guy decided it was time I updated my style. I thought The Boss was the boss who kept you in line " or tried to, anyway. Well, The Boss IS the boss " at least, we keep telling him that. Oh, no, The Boss would never get his precious plaid green jacket dirty from wrangling. Are you saying The Boss is a chicken? After all, chickens are funny. So what was it like having Tom Eaton as your brave, down-to-earth and funny wrangler? When I moved to the big city from Philmont, I went on a whole lot of wacky adventures, and Mr. Eaton recorded them all. He was the first one to meet my evil twin, Ordep. He was the first one to taste my awesome alfalfa ice cream. Eaton, and now Mr. I tell him all about The Boss and what goes on at the office, as well as my latest adventures. So what made you choose Mr. Eaton as your wrangler? He was the best at bringing my wacky adventures to life. Eaton gave me my vivacious vocabulary and my bodacious burro-ness. And the new wrangler? I mean, there are chickens involved " and chickens are always funny!
