Action Against Hunger is a leading agency working to save the lives of malnourished children and to stop famine from returning in South Sudan. At one of Action Against Hunger's nutrition sites in Malualkon, in Northern Bahr el Ghazal, South Sudan, children are screened for malnutrition.

Is it psychological, biological or emotional? Why is it so hard to shed that extra weight? People have been asking that question forever it seems. Can medical research help us? Did you know that exercise might not be as important as you thought? Plus, new evidence suggests that the benefit of weight loss surgery might be obtained by not having surgery at all. Many People Affected In the s, about 10 percent of United States adults between age 20 and 74 were considered obese. Now, that number is approaching 40 percent. What caused this explosion? One thing for certain is that we simply eat more. For example, in the average person consumed grams of carbohydrates per day. In , that rose to grams. During the same period, the amount of food consumed outside the home has almost doubled. We do less activity. That alone explains the problem in a nutshell. Plus, the content of food has deteriorated in time â€” becoming high calorie and low nutrition. You know all this already, right? So, why is it so hard to lose weight? Too Much Emphasis on Exercise? The weight loss industry means well, but the data is what counts. No matter how much you work out, most of your time is not spent in the gym. Now, for a world-class athlete, this might be different, but for the rest of us, most of your calories are burned at rest. In fact, 30 percent of calories are burned during physical activity while the other 70 percent get burned from your basal metabolic rate. So, yes, if you have a fast metabolism, you tend to be thinner. Another reason we have trouble with weight is that we bite off more than we can chew pun intended. That is, you try to do it all at once â€” exercise and diet. Then, after a few weeks, you end up exhausted and fall back into old habits and cravings. In most cases, it gets even worse than before. What if you focused on just one thing instead? To lose half a pound a week, you have cut out about calories per day from your diet. Which one seems harder to do? Exercise Makes You Hungry The other problem is that working out makes you hungry, so you might end up eating more. You might even feel you deserve it. So, for now, the best strategy might be to do just one thing at a time, that is, change your food intake habits. Just eat less fat, they say. If you rely on these, you starve yourself of important nutrients. The result may trigger an even stronger hunger reflex. Anything in a package is suspicious. If you eat more fresh food the nutritional value skyrockets, and your body processes it more effectively. Even more revealing is that two people might react to certain foods in an opposite way. One study looked at a variety of biomarkers in people between the ages of 18 and In some people, certain foods made their blood sugar go up and, in others, the same food made blood sugar fall. This means there has to be more to it than just eat less fat. The results of this exciting research reveal something that might make weight loss surgery obsolete. Under the Knife More people are turning to surgical procedures to achieve weight loss. Now, while this has proven to be effective for some, the reasons might not be so clear. Yes, a smaller stomach gets full faster, but something else is clearly going on. Remember how some foods cause different blood sugar reactions in different people? It turns out the microbiome may be the reason. The millions upon millions of bacteria that live in your intestines help determine how you process food. If they do this efficiently and effectively, you should be healthier. Gut surgery changes the microbiome, and amazingly this alone may be a big reason why surgery works. Microbiome Research If gut flora promotes weight loss, could there be a way to change yours? After people undergo surgery, their gut chemistry changes dramatically. For instance, Lactobacillus is usually not found in the gut until after surgery. Part of this might be due to a drop in intestinal acidity. So, maybe the answer rests in dropping the pH of your stomach to promote Lactobacillus colonization. Why does this bug help? It stimulates the production of natural appetite-suppressing hormones, so you want to eat less. For now, things are still in the research phase. Still, many are already taking Lactobacillus-containing probiotics hoping it will take the edge off their hunger. Did Stress Change the Microbiome? The cause of gut bacteria change is hard to pin down. Some scientists are wondering how much this has to do with the global obesity epidemic. Could stress be part of it? This leads to sustained levels of stress hormones like cortisol rushing through our bloodstreams. This hormone increases your appetite and causes a craving for carbohydrates. Could cortisol also adversely affect the microbiome making it a double whammy against weight control? Anything that helps with stress reduction, such as better sleep, should help with weight loss. One simple way to get better rest is to turn off your cellphone 30 to 60 minutes before bedtime. The light emitted from the screen stimulates your brain and disrupts sleep patterns. Could the rise of handheld tech also be making it harder to lose weight? Exercise Right Did you think that a weight loss article would not recommend exercise? However, how you exercise makes all the difference. If we return to the basal metabolic rate concept, we can see how smarter exercise makes a difference. The key is to have an all-out effort with a short rest interval. This creates an oxygen deficit, which means your body craves oxygen and your muscles burn. The result is a greater calorie consumption during your workout. Exercise apps like the 7-minute workout, high-intensity interval training HIIT and CrossFit are all based on this theory. Despite all the research and technology, there is no magic bullet. In any case, your mental toughness will make a difference. Pick one change, just one to start with. Take your time, make it a life habit and then add another. Think of it as transforming your life for the better. Chapter 3 : What Makes America Great: Perseverance –“ Young Patriots For Liberty Fashion Climbing is a lesson in perseverance. Despite his family's disdain and his "continual frustration" over the gap between artistic and commercial success, Cunningham is remarkably without.

What Makes America Great: Perseverance Looking into our American history, there are many attributes of those men and women who have come before us that we appreciate today. Yet as history reveals to us, they were completely unprepared for the harshest of conditions of such a wilderness. Dozens of their collective band died, while all suffered from hunger and malnourishment. With the leadership of men such as John Carver and William Bradford, the Pilgrims were essentially able to get firmly back on their feet, establishing a long-lasting peace with Chief Massasoit and his Wampanoag tribe. By the fall of the next year, they were able to perform the first harvest on the crops they had sown, and giving glory to the One who had providentially provided for them, held a Thanksgiving celebration soon thereafter. Abraham Lincoln also showed this great virtue of resolution as well. At the very young age of twenty-eight, his lifelong advocacy against slavery began when, as a state legislator, he publicly protested that evil institution in a speech with a fellow representative. When elected to Congress as a representative, he assisted in co-sponsoring an eventually unsuccessful bill which would have abolished slavery in the District of Columbia. The ensuing year, state Republicans convened to choose their nominee. No one was surprised when Lincoln was the result. And though, ultimately, it did not lead him to victory, the eyes of the nation were thereafter fixed on this tall, lanky man, who was quickly becoming a household name. The national focus, however, soon drifted elsewhere. But his assurances were not enough. By April of , full-scale rebellion and secession had taken place in eleven states. Throughout his presidency and the ensuing civil war, Lincoln combined the preservation of the Union and the abolition of slavery as the ultimate goals of his administration. In , Congress enacted legislation banning the institution in the Union, and in , the Emancipation Proclamation took effect, essentially recognizing slaves as freed in the South. Also exhibiting this quality of incredible determination as the commander of the Continental Army was none other than George Washington. As his army lacked the incredible manpower of his British counterparts, so also did his troops want for the sufficient weaponry, supplies, and basic training they needed to be a viable force in the field. This happened not once, nor twice, but many times as the war dragged on. Fellow officers were repeatedly disloyal, some treacherous. The soldiers themselves frequently deserted, leaving Washington with very few men whom he could actually count on in the tight spots of battle. But as we know and definitely live out and see! What did he accredit this spirit of perseverance to? May His favor shine down on us as we attempt to follow the examples set by those who have come before us, and live out this attribute which has made our nation great.

Chapter 5 : Perseverance | Definition of Perseverance by Merriam-Webster

Perseverance and bravery were unanimous among the group. Indeed, Katniss' life prior to the "games" is infused with risk-taking and resilience through poverty and oppression.

According to Calvinists, since God has drawn the elect to faith in Christ by regenerating their hearts and convincing them of their sins, and thus saving their souls by His own work and power, it naturally follows that they will be kept by the same power to the end. Since God has made satisfaction for the sins of the elect, they can no longer be condemned for them, and through the help of the Holy Spirit, they must necessarily persevere as Christians and in the end be saved. Calvinists believe this is what Peter is teaching in 1st Peter 1, verse 5 when he says, that true believers are "kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation". Outside Calvinist denominations this doctrine is widely considered to be flawed. Calvinists also believe that all who are born again and justified before God necessarily and inexorably proceed to sanctification. Failure to proceed to sanctification in their view is considered by some as evidence that the person in question was never truly saved to begin with. The Westminster Confession of Faith has defined perseverance as follows: They whom God hath accepted in His Beloved, effectually called and sanctified by his Spirit, can neither totally nor finally fall away from the state of grace; but shall certainly persevere therein to the end, and be eternally saved. Essentially, Reformed doctrine believes that the same God whose power justified the Christian believer is also at work in the continued sanctification of that believer. Anyone who does not do what is right is not a child of God. Hodges, Bill Bright, and others. This view, like the traditional Calvinist view, emphasizes that people are saved purely by an act of divine grace that does not depend at all on the deeds of the individual, and for that reason, advocates insist that nothing the person can do can affect his or her salvation. He sums up his deep conviction that salvation is by faith alone in Christ alone when he claims, "Even if a believer for all practical purposes becomes an unbeliever, his salvation is not in jeopardy" believers who lose or abandon their faith will retain their salvation. Look at that verse [John 3: According to Jesus, what must a person do to keep from being judged for sin? Must he stop doing something? Must he promise to stop doing something? Must he have never done something? The answer is so simple that many stumble all over it without ever seeing it. All Jesus requires is that the individual "believe in" Him. We are saved because at a moment in time we expressed faith in our enduring Lord" p. The doctrine sees the work of salvation as wholly monergistic, which is to say that God alone performs it and man has no part in the process beyond receiving it, and therefore, proponents argue that man cannot undo what they believe God has done. By comparison, in traditional Calvinism, people, who are otherwise unable to follow God, are enabled by regeneration to cooperate with him, and so the Reformed tradition sees itself as mediating between the total monergism of the non-traditional Calvinist view and the synergism of the Wesleyan, Arminian, and Roman Catholic views in which even unregenerate man can choose to cooperate with God in salvation. The traditional Calvinist doctrine teaches that a person is secure in salvation because he or she was predestined by God, whereas in the Free Grace or non-traditional Calvinist views, a person is secure because at some point in time he or she has believed the Gospel message Dave Hunt, What Love is This, p. Evangelical criticism[edit] Both traditional Calvinism and traditional Arminianism have rejected Free Grace theology. Reformed theology has uniformly asserted that "no man is a Christian who does not feel some special love for righteousness" Institutes, [13] and therefore sees Free Grace theology, which allows for the concept of a "carnal Christian" or even an "unbelieving Christian", as a form of radical antinomianism. Arminianism, which has always believed true believers can give themselves completely over to sin, has also rejected the Free Grace view for the opposite reason of Calvinism: Free Grace theology struggles to maintain a middle ground, hoping to grasp the permanency of salvation Calvinism with one hand, while maintaining a true believer can still give up faith and choose to live a life of sin and unbelief Arminianism. Both Calvinists and Arminians appeal to Biblical passages such as 1 Cor. Otherwise, you have believed in vain", Hebrews 3: If we disown him, he will also disown us". February Learn how and when to remove this template message In addition to fitting neatly in the overarching Calvinist soteriology , Reformed and Free Grace advocates alike find specific support for the doctrine in various passages from the Bible: He does not come into judgment, but has passed from death to life. Jesus said to them, "I am the bread of life; whoever comes to me shall not hunger, and whoever believes in me shall never thirst. But I said to you that you have seen me and yet do not believe. All that the Father gives me will come to me, and whoever comes to me I will never cast out. I give them eternal life, and they will never perish, and no one will snatch them out of my hand. Since, therefore, we have now been justified by his blood, much more shall we be saved by him from the wrath of God. There is therefore now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or danger, or sword? For I am sure that neither death nor life, nor angels nor rulers, nor things present nor things to come, nor powers, nor height nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord. For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable. For we have come to share in Christ, if indeed we hold our original confidence firm to the end. They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would have continued with us. But they went out, that it might become plain that they all are not of us. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace toward me was not in vain. On the contrary, I worked harder than any of them, though it was not I, but the grace of God that is with me. But God, being rich in mercy, because of the great love with which he loved us, even when we were dead in our trespasses, made us alive together with Christ " by grace you have been saved " and raised us up with him and seated us with him in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus And do not grieve the Holy Spirit of God, by whom you were sealed for the day of redemption. And I am sure of this, that he who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ. But I am not ashamed, for I know whom I have believed, and I am convinced that he is able to guard until that Day what has been entrusted to me. Now may the God of peace who brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, the great shepherd of the sheep, by the blood of the eternal covenant, equip you with everything good that you may do his will, working in us that which is pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever. For everyone who has been born of God overcomes the world. And this is the victory that has overcome the world " our faith. Who is it that overcomes the world except the one who believes that Jesus is the Son of God? In him you also, when you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation, and believed in him, were sealed with the promised Holy Spirit, who is the guarantee of our inheritance until we acquire possession of it, to the praise of his glory. I have guarded them, and not one of them has been lost except the son of destruction, that the Scripture might be fulfilled. Now may the God of peace himself sanctify you completely, and may your whole spirit and soul and body be kept blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. He who calls you is faithful; he will surely do it. But the Lord is faithful. He will establish you and guard you against the evil one. And this is the testimony, that God gave us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. Whoever has the Son has life; whoever does not have the Son of God does not have life. I write these things to you who believe in the name of the Son of God that you may know that you have eternal life. So when God desired to show more convincingly to the heirs of the promise the unchangeable character of his purpose, he guaranteed it with an oath, so that by two unchangeable things, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we who have fled for refuge might have strong encouragement to hold fast to the hope set before us. We have this as a sure and steadfast anchor of the soul, a hope that enters into the inner place behind the curtain I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me forever, for their own good and the good of their children after them. I will make with them an everlasting covenant, that I will not turn away from doing good to them. And I will put the fear of me in their hearts, that they may not turn from me. Psalms Isaiah Listen to me, O house of Jacob, all the remnant of the house of Israel, who have been borne by me from before your birth, carried from the womb; even to your old age I am he, and to gray hairs I will carry you. I have made, and I will bear; I will carry and will save. But it is not as though the word of God has failed. For not all who are descended from Israel belong to Israel, and not all are children of Abraham because they are his offspring, but "Through Isaac shall your offspring be named. Now I know that the LORD saves his anointed; he will answer him from his holy heaven with the saving might of his right hand. Love the LORD, all you his saints! The LORD preserves the faithful but abundantly repays the one who acts in pride. For the LORD loves justice; he will not forsake his saints. They are preserved forever, but the children of the wicked shall be cut off. Cast your burden on the LORD, and he will sustain you; he will never permit the righteous to be moved. They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever. As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever. Calvinist interpretations[edit] Some Calvinists admit that their interpretation is not without difficulties. One apparent consequence is that not all who "have shared in the Holy Spirit" [Acts This is a consequence Calvinists are willing to accept since the Bible also says that King Saul had the "Spirit of God" in some sense and even prophesied by it, [1Sam Calvin says, God indeed favors none but the elect alone with the Spirit of regeneration, and that by this they are distinguished from the reprobate€ But I cannot admit that all this is any reason why he should not grant the reprobate also some taste of his grace, why he should not irradiate their minds with some sparks of his light, why he should not give them some perception of his goodness, and in some sort engrave his word on their hearts. While opponents of perseverance identify the persons as Christian believers, Calvinists suggest several other options: These passages are not clear enough to describe a regenerate person or "true Christian" , and thus they do not describe the situation of a true believer. Instead, the persons in question may well have been part of the church community and had the advantages concomitant with that membership citing the benefits of being a member of the covenant community in the Old Testament mentioned in Romans 3: In an effort to corroborate this interpretation, they also cite such passages as 1 John 2: The passages refer to Jewish Christians who were reverting to Judaism. The passages refer to the rejection of the covenant community as a whole, not individual believers Verbrugge. Some other passages put forth against the Calvinist doctrine include:

A more commercially viable invention was his foldable Fan Hat, which resembles an inverted, pointed cupcake wrapper. To support himself, Cunningham took unglamorous side jobs, including restaurant work. He recalls subsisting on a few tablespoons of Ovaltine a day over one hungry July Fourth weekend. He mourns the demise of hats and the subsequent loss of his millinery business in the early s, but moves almost seamlessly into fashion reporting. Cunningham stresses the importance of dressing for pleasure, though it seems what he actually means is dressing up for pleasure. His book makes it clear that he fervently believed that style and a pulled-together look are important. They are our essence—they are what make us glow. Maybe you shine when you express kindness or hope? Or perhaps when you use humor or creativity? Whenever we express a signature strength we are probably at our best — authentic, strong, and real. When you think of Katniss, the star of The Hunger Games, what strengths make her glow? I asked this of a few people who read the book, saw the movie, and know quite a bit about the VIA Classification of character strengths. Here is what they said for a list of character strengths go to the original source on the topic or check out my earlier blog. Perseverance and bravery were unanimous among the group. These qualities are deep resources within her and she immediately turns to these as needed in a variety of situations. Love was almost unanimously chosen, perhaps because love is one of the easier character strengths to spot in films. Because this love strength does not naturally emerge — and it seems to cause her more discomfort not energy and excitement at times — I wonder if love would be a phasic strength for Katniss. Phasic strengths are strengths we bring forth strongly in certain situations e. The way Katniss honors Rue with song, care, and flowers and the way she upholds a respect for the forest seems to come from a deep place of interconnectedness with people and appreciation for life. Self-regulation is also apparent to me. Her hunting is a metaphor for this. Skilled archers explain how one must be intense and relaxed during the practice of archery. Such mastery with a bow and arrow takes incredible self-control and practice over time. But, in even these moments, she uses exquisite accuracy and self-control, despite her rise in anger. To some degree, it is both strengths. Judgment involves logical and critical thinking to analyze a situation while creativity involves originality and coming up with multiple pathways to find a solution. Ultimately, Katniss is a team player — perhaps not on large teams — but in dyads, she is excellent. She teams with Rue, with Peeta, and for years hunting successfully with Gale. To a degree, she had collaborations with Haymitch and Cinna as well. So, if Katniss were to take the VIA Survey today, my guess is that her signature strengths listed in descending order would be— Perseverance.
