The images have been well preserved and it gives us a tiny window into the past where we can admire these women, their unique style, and show respect for their lives. Although Native American women often had different roles than the men they were greatly respected. They often had the same sorts of rights as the men in their tribe which is incredible for the time period. In some groups, women were the ones who owned the home and property inside. While it was typical for a chief to be male there were some tribes that would have the women select who he would be. Army Officer George W. Always treat a woman with honor and consideration. Inside them are the powers of love and strength given by the Moon and the Earth. When everyone else gives up, it is the women who sing the songs of strength. She is the backbone of the people. So, to our women we say, sing your songs of strength; pray for your special powers; keep our people strong; be respectful, gentle, and modest. Elsie Vance Chestuen, Chiricahua 8. Cherokee Nanyehi, Lakota A Young Ute Woman, Taos Pueblo Tribe Girl, A Kiowa Girl, The men should never put women down or shame them in any way. When we have problems, we should seek their counsel. We should share with them openly. A woman has intuitive thought. She has access to another system of knowledge that few men develop. She can help us understand. We must treat her in a good way. Hopi Girl, Pretty Nose, Cheyenne, , By L. Hopi Girls, , By Carl Werntz This is my vow. As children of the Creator, giver of life and source of all human life they must all be respected. Kiowa Girl, Show honor and esteem for all women! The Creator gave women the responsibility for bringing new life into the world. Life is sacred, so I will look upon the women in a sacred manner. Julie Nelson, I will work with her to create a home atmosphere of respect, security and harmony. Susan Bullock-tibbitts, Comanche Girls,
