Daily prayers are collected in a book called a siddur, which derives from the Hebrew root meaning "order," because the siddur shows the order of prayers. It is the same root as the word seder, which refers to the Passover home service. Undoubtedly the oldest fixed daily prayer in Judaism is the Shema. This consists of Deut. Note that the first paragraph commands us to speak of these matters "when you retire and when you arise. The next major development in Jewish prayer occurred during the Babylonian Exile, 6th century B. People were not able to sacrifice in the Temple at that time, so they used prayer as a substitute for sacrifice. People got together to pray three times a day, corresponding to the three daily sacrifices. There was an additional prayer service on Sabbaths and certain holidays, to correspond to the additional sacrifices of those days. Some suggest that this may already have been a common practice among the pious before the Exile. After the Exile, these daily prayer services continued. In the 5th century B. This is the Shemoneh Esrei, which means "18" and refers to the 18 blessings originally contained within the prayer. It is also referred to as the Amidah standing, because we stand while we recite it, or Tefilah prayer, as in The Prayer, because it is the essence of all Jewish prayer. This prayer is the cornerstone of every Jewish service. The blessings of the Shemoneh Esrei can be broken down into 3 groups: One of the thirteen requests the one against heretics was added around the 2nd century C. Another important part of certain prayer services is a reading from the Torah first 5 books of the Bible and the Prophets. The Torah has been divided into 54 sections, so that if each of these sections is read and studied for a week, we can cover the entire Torah in a year every year our leap years are 54 weeks long; regular years are 50 or so, we double up shorter portions on a few weeks in regular years. At various times in our history, our oppressors did not permit us to have public readings of the Torah, so we read a roughly corresponding section from the Prophets referred to as a Haftarah. Today, we read both the Torah portion and the Haftarah portion. These are read on Mondays, Thursdays, Sabbaths and some holidays. The Torah and haftarah readings are performed with great ceremony: There are a few other matters that should be mentioned, though. There is a long series of morning blessings at the beginning of the morning service. Some people recite these at home. They deal with a lot of concerns with getting up in the morning, and things we are obligated to do daily. I like to think of it as a warm-up, getting you in the mood for prayer in the morning. There are also a few particularly significant prayers. The most important is the Kaddish, the only prayer in Aramaic to my knowledge, which praises G-d. May His great Name grow exalted and sanctified in the world that He created as He willed. May He give reign to His kingship in your lifetimes and in your days, and in the lifetimes of the entire family of Israel, swiftly and soon. May His great Name be blessed forever and ever. Blessed, praised, glorified, exalted, extolled, mighty There are several variations on it for different times in the service. One variation is set aside for mourners to recite, the congregation only providing the required responses. Another important prayer is Aleinu, which is recited at or near the end of every service. It also praises G-d. Here is a little of it in English, to give you an idea: It is our duty to praise the Master of all, to ascribe greatness to the Molder of primeval creation, for He has not made us like the nations of the lands Therefore, we put our hope in you, Adoshem our G-d, that we may soon see Your mighty splendor On certain holidays, we also recite Hallel, which consists of Psalms Many holidays have special additions to the liturgy. See Yom Kippur Liturgy for additions related to that holiday. Here is an outline of the order of the daily services:
