These are some main reasons why students take the exam: To prepare or validate their readiness for their SAT test. To qualify for the scholarship competition program. The PSAT scores are a part of the scholarship qualifying criteria. Every year, over 1. For example, there were 8. Some students in their 8th or 9th grade sit for the exam as well, so that they can have a feel of how it looks like. These students practice with the test as sophomores, and then take it as juniors. This helps them identify their weak areas so that they can get it right in their second try during their junior years. The math section contains data analysis, algebra, problem solving, advanced math, additional topics like trigonometry, geometry, and pre-calculus. There are two sub-sections with a total of 47 questions. The first sub-section has optional questions, and one is allowed to use a calculator during it. This section is allocated 45 minutes. The second section takes 25 minutes and does not allow the use of a calculator. It is evidenced-based, and consists of reading, as well as the use of vocabulary. It has 47 questions and an allocated completion time of 60 minutes. This section comprises grammar and its usage. There are 44 questions which are allocated 35 minutes. Check out this article A needy individual can also apply for a test fee waiver. As for the registration deadlines, the students should confirm with their school principal or guidance counsellor. In this case, a student must first obtain an approval from the College Board to be allowed to use such materials. PSAT is usually taken in fall, that is, in October each year. Those students who take the test around mid-October will receive their scores in mid-December the same year. The test takers do not lose points for the skipped and incorrectly answered questions. The next step is to total all the raw scores on a range of being the highest score. Next is to convert the raw scores into scaled scores. The new scaled scores would range from This way, students will have a chance to practice for the essay section of SAT. The PrepAway PSAT practice test does not include scores for the essay section administered by the respective high schools. How can you pass the PSAT test? It is important that you prepare for this crucial exam well enough. Here are some tips to help you pass your PSAT test: Understand your test well The beginning of preparation is at understanding your test requirements. It is good that you get to know why you need to take the exam, know the format and other requirements like the topics and the areas to be tested. Choosing this route will help you know what areas to focus on. Make sure that you are attentive while in class and review your high school notes. In this case, you will know your weak areas and work on them so that by the time you are taking PSAT in your freshman years, you will have a better chance of passing it with a good mark. Find a tutor A personal tutor could guide you through the PSAT topics in each of the areas to be tested. You can ask questions regarding the various topics or any difficult areas that you come across. Kaplan, Khan Academy, and Princeton Review are some of the online platforms where you can find a tutor, as well as other resources to help you prepare for PSAT. Study guides and practice tests There are numerous practice tests and study guides that you can make use of while preparing for your exam. Some of them are like these practice tests found on the College Board website. Make sure you study well. Read through all the topics and understand them. Do not try to simply memorize the study material, but comprehend it thoroughly. Do not panic during your test Take time to read through the test questions to ensure you understand the requirements before attempting them. Relax and answer your test with confidence and you will be sure of passing. Ensure that you set your goal to help you stay motivated throughout your test preparation period. With the right materials and preparation, it is possible for you to attain top scores in your PSAT.

Peanut allergy is the most prevalent food allergy in the United States, affecting around one and a half million people, and it is potentially on the rise in children in the United States. While thought to be the most common cause of food-related death, deaths from food allergies are very rare. The allergy typically begins at a very young age and remains present for life for most people. Approximately one-fifth to one-quarter of children with a peanut allergy, however, outgrow it. Treatment involves careful avoidance of peanuts or any food that may contain peanut pieces or oils. For some sufferers, exposure to even the smallest amount of peanut product can trigger a serious reaction. Symptoms of peanut allergy can include skin reactions, itching around the mouth, digestive problems, shortness of breath, and runny or stuffy nose. The most severe peanut allergies can result in anaphylaxis, which requires immediate treatment with epinephrine. Up to one-third of people with peanut allergies have severe reactions. Without treatment, anaphylactic shock can result in death due to obstruction of the airway, or heart failure. Signs of anaphylaxis include constriction of airways and difficulty breathing, shock, a rapid pulse, and dizziness or lightheadedness. As of yet, there is no treatment to prevent or cure allergic reactions to peanuts. In May of , however, Duke University Medical Center food allergy experts announced that they expect to offer a treatment for peanut allergies within five years. Scientists do not know for sure why peanut proteins induce allergic reactions, nor do they know why some people develop peanut allergies while others do not. There is a strong genetic component to allergies: Someone suffering from a peanut allergy needs to be cautious about the foods he or she eats and the products he or she puts on his or her skin. Common foods that should be checked for peanut content are ground nuts, cereals, granola, grain breads, energy bars, and salad dressings. Store prepared cookies, pastries, and frozen desserts like ice cream can also contain peanuts. Parents of children with peanut allergies should notify key people child care providers, school personnel, etc. According to the passage, approximately what percentage of people with peanut allergies have severe reactions?

There are no reviews yet. Only logged in customers who have purchased this product may leave a review. There is no other company I am aware of that would have replied to my crazy email with something so concrete in fact most other companies would not and do not have that as an option. The customer service we received from Kelsey was top notch and I appreciated the ongoing progress reports telling me how my teachers and students were doing, as well as next steps. Our students loved the technology component and our teachers really embraced it. Team PrepWorks is awesome!! I use my BrailleNote by connecting the unit to a PC. I can read the material using the braille display, and I can answer the questions and check if I need more practice on any of the assignments given. It is so uncommon to find amazing Civics programs. What was so great is that it truly worked for students across all levels and scores which does not happen with any other programs. It helps me understand civics more in a fun and educational way. I know that I can count on Prepworks to help me. It has helped me understand more of what I am learning. Prepworks is a good program and it helped raise my test scores. It has a lot of questions which can help me improve my tests. It also has explanations if I did something wrong. I just love it and I would definitely look forward to recommend this website to my peers! I just like the Expert and the explanations she gives us! Thanks, Prepworks, for your support and help!! There is a big push to improve ACT scores in our district this year so our implementation was timely. We truly think you have cornered a market in individualized tutoring for the ACT! William began tutoring for the ACT with Prepworks a month ago and already is showing good progress. In sum, I am singing Prepworks praises to friends who have yet to experience the college testing and admissions process. Thank you for making this for us! The instructor who came and taught at our school was phenomenal! really phenomenal. We had a student come in today and tell us he used Prepworks regularly! He went from a 12 to a 21!!!! Hope there are more like this. That is two more points than I was aiming for, and a seven point improvement from my last diagnostic! We wanted to thank you and Michael so much for all your help. We really appreciate it. Congratulations on your team work. Emilio applied to four schools and was admitted to three excellent New England boarding schools. A year and a half ago, the story repeated itself as my daughter prepared for her SSAT. Again, the excellent preparation allowed my daughter to obtain very high scores and be admitted to every school she applied to. I recommend Prepworks enthusiastically. When a question has arisen, their staff members have responded in a timely manner and have worked with the individual teacher to satisfy the concern. Counselors have higher standards for the quality of preparation we want for our students, and we are better able to make recommendations to our students about how to prepare, when to sit for the exams, and what score improvement to expect. The individualized attention that students get with Prepworks, paired with the skilled and personable instructors, allow us to turn our students over to Prepworks with confidence. We have relatively wide range of academically achieving students in our population, and Prepworks can address all their unique needs and issues. Smartly presented and with exquisite attention to detail, I find their products and support to be cutting-edge, thorough, and delivered as promised in a personal, timely, and efficient manner. The programs certainly provide an optimum learning experience for the students. Families appreciate the clarification and assistance they receive from the well-versed staff. Teachers and administrators highly value their continuous feedback and support, enabling us to maximize use of the products and effectively monitor student progress.
