President Buhari conferred with the title of Ochioha NdiIgbo 1 by South East traditional council of rulers led by Eze Eberechi Dick during his visit to Ebonyi State on 14th Nov This road project comes at a time when the administration has increased the pace of the completion of the Lagos-Ibadan expressway and is considering increasing the scope of work on it by, possibly up to N billion; the East-West expressway, Port Harcourt to Lagos and is pumping money into the realization of the Second Niger bridge. At the same meeting, the FEC approved the award for the rehabilitation of the Efire-Araromi-Aiyede-Aiyela road in Ogun State at the cost of about N14 billion, as well the contract for the augmentation of the contract for the rehabilitation of outstanding sections of Onitsha-Enugu expressway: This contract was first awarded for N24 billion in but the scale of work done is, to say the least, appalling. This road, it will be recalled, is one of those that the leaders of the South-East brought to the attention of the President when they recently met him. The revised contract amount approved to do this work is now N62 billion. Infrastructure experts are already claiming that the road infrastructure sector is today enjoying its best moment for a long time. The first two years of the Buhari administration have seen a quantum leap in the funding roads infrastructure. In , N19 billion was set aside the former administration of Dr Goodluck Jonathan for all federal roads. The government under President Muhammadu Buhari has set aside N billion for the reconstruction and rehabilitation of strategic roads across the country in In , N73 billion was spent while in this financial year, alone, about N billion has so far been released. For this year, , the Minister of Power, Works and Housing, Babatunde Fashola revealed that 63 roads were identified in 34 states of the Federation construction, repair and rehabilitation. The state of the Abuja-Kaduna-Zaria-Kano is in a serious distress and is in urgent in need of reconstruction. After years of usage, the lifespan of road has expired. The pavement structure is unable to cope with the prevailing traffic. Yet, this is a road that is considered as one of the most important and busiest roads in the country. Economically, this is the road that conveys all the grains, tomatoes, sorghum and goats and cows that feed the other parts of the country. Politically, this road leads to seven million, one hundred votes, roughly about 50 percent of the votes that helped to put the Muhammadu Buhari administration in office. The benefits of doing this road include a reduction of road accidents and loss of life. It should improve socioeconomic life of the people around the road corridors and help to curtail increasing incidents of armed robbery, kidnapping, and other forms of criminal activities common to the road. Kidnapping has become a bane of the Abuja-Kaduna axis, as result of the decrepit condition of the road while Kaduna-Kano has a national record of accidents and deaths on a daily basis. Travel time which used be about four hours or less is now six hours. This has increased, not only travel time but also costs for transporters and commuters. Funding for the road project which was awarded to the famously efficient Julius Berger will be funded from and appropriations with additional provisions being made in the subsequent years appropriations covering the the lifespan of the project. This notwithstanding, the FEC directed that the Ministers of Finance and that of Power, Works and Housing meet to find the money for its completion within the stated three years to avoid the horrible fate that befell the East-West expressway. A robust roads infrastructure which just entered a higher trajectory is, in the vision of the Buhari administration, the key to increased efficiency of the movement of goods, persons and services across the country. It will boost investments and create jobs. These are things that we need to do to kickstart the economy. The first two years of the government have witnessed a drastic reduction of the number of stalled road projects and the commencement of new ones all over the country. At the rate it is boosting infrastructure investments, roads, rail and power, the Buhari administration has undoubtedly found the road to glory.

Having a Tassadar picked nudged me into it because I felt Malfurion would offer the most difficulties for the enemy team. Overall I thought if we play our comp well we should have no problem winning. Match This was an interesting game. The beginning of the game started off mostly even as no one was rotating or trying to get a gank at all. During the first two objectives we were able to edge out the enemy team due to our ability to delay versus their need to be in closer range to stop us. Their Rexxar was not even a factor in these altar spawns because on the first one he stayed top to try and soak XP, which forced our Diablo to stay up there with him. Take our first post 10 team fight as an example: We decided it would be a good time to go for boss, and the enemy team figured it out and went for their own boss. Diablo confirms this while on the way up to their boss by casting Apocalypse. We try to get there to possibly steal or wipe them but we cannot and before we get 16 we start a fight for a seemingly non-beneficial tribute for us and just more kills. So we got a team fight where we lose 3 members and they lose 0. That is pretty bad for us, right? Our team managed to lose only a fort and front wall in mid lane from this team fight, but we gained a Tribute yes, our Sylvanas managed to capture the tribute during that team fight , bottom keep wall cleared, bottom keep damage, and did not lose an experience lead. So what was their big mistake in this? Mostly focusing on getting more kills over the objective and the possibility they had to catch up in experience or get ahead. Once they killed Greymane, every single member of the enemy team focused on killing Diablo while our Sylvanas smartly grabbed the tribute. Had they sent Misha to poke Sylvanas and left to go push with their boss or defend ours, they may have gotten more than they did for this big opportunity we handed them. This trend continued throughout the game but as soon as the very next tribute we see the next example. At this stage in the game, a full team wipe to me means you will lose a keep or the game especially when you already have one lane with keep wall damage. This happens a few more times back and forth. We would get an advantage, we would do something stupid, they would kill us but not get any real advantage on the map, then we would come back, get some kills, get an advantage on the map until it finally broke in our favor when their Rehgar decides to do this To make matters worse, a tribute spawned in the worst possible place for the enemy team. Why does this make matters worse you ask? Well it turned out they were trying to sneak a boss while we had two dead, and because we planned on stalling the tribute we headed up there only to find them attacking the the boss.
