

Chapter 1 : Social Studies Connects - Kane Press

Social Studies Connects makes history, geography, economics, civics and culture come alive! Each book in the series combines likeable characters and engaging plots with important social studies concepts kids can relate to.

None of these qualities that make me who I am can be tested. Listen to the never haves, then listen close to me Anything can happen, child. Top Stress Buster Tips of Lesson planning, late assignments, and a classroom full of kids make it easy for your stress level to boil over. Here are a some of the top stress busters of Keep a few things that always make you smile in your desk. On your most trying days, take a momentary mental break from your class and your students and your crazy life by taking pleasure in your hidden treasures. Let yourself take a "brain-free break" during a break or lunch period. Use it to play Angry Birds, read for pleasure, or to just zone out for a few minutes. Complete one task before moving on to the next one. Top Question of the Day Surveys of As teachers, you have seen and heard it all and we love when you share it! What is your least favorite "labor" as a teacher? Babysitting duties, like cafeteria and hallway guard. Writing lesson plans from insane templates that no one ever looks at. It is only for the administrators to protect themselves. It is being pushed back to the classroom teacher at our school instead of admin. Passionate people inspire people I connect with my kids by genuinely loving them and that connection gets them interested in who I am and what I have to say or teach. I always have high expectations for my students telling them that our class is the best 4th grade class in school. I give them brags on a chart everyday for good behaviors, brags from administration, and other teachers. After the chart is filled we have a surprise party. Mary Ellen-- I remember her-- she was kind, caring, and she let me be me.
